JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Senate To Question Value Of Sleep, Pep And Worry Pills; Huge Oil Pools May Lie Off Vietnam; It Didn't Sway LBJ; Ex-Officer Offers Vets Jobs, Peddles Names To Companies.

THE SILVER STAR AND PURPLE HEART were presented posthumously to the Leslie Karnes family by Capt. Samuel Lamey, Sgt. Major Marvin Sealander, and M/Sgt. Richard Sullivan, all of the fifth army advisory group in Cape Girardeau. Accepting the medals were Mrs. Karnes, Sue Ann, 6, Michael and Mark, both 12.

'He Would Die Doing This Fighting'

By JUDY GAZETTE

On Feb. 16 at approximately 10 a.m., Army Sgt. 1/C Leslie Leroy Karnes was driving an amphibious vehicle through the swamp land of Vietnam, near Can Gao canal, 25 miles south of Rach Gia.

He was part of a five man "high brass" patrol involved in a forward reconnaissance through saturated Viet Cong territory.

The patrol was ambushed and every man was wounded -- Karnes and a lieutenant colonel were killed by enemy fire.

The Can Gao canal represents little more than a spot on a newspaper map and the lieutenant colonel's name would not strike any familiar notes in this community.

Sergeant Karnes, 33, born and reared in Sikeston, left this town a daily reminder of his tragic death -- a Korean widow and three children. They are survivors -- next of kin.

His widow's name is Soon Lim -- "Sooni" she likes to be called. The children are Michael Leslie and Mark Lynn, twin boys, 12, and Sue Ann, 6.

After talking with Soonie, I think that her childhood and that of Karnes are of interest because of the sharp contrast in their early lives.

He was born Jan. 21, 1938, in Neelyville, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Karnes. He graduated from schools in Sikeston, enlisted in the national guard when he was 14, and entered the regular army when he was 17. He was sheltered from the immediate and personal horrors of enemy invasion and war.

Sooni was born in Kim Chen, Korea in 1935, into certain poverty and surrounded by death. When she was three, her family was moved to Japan, and back to Korea in 1945. She went to school only when the war permitted, and that was not often or for long.

Karnes has one brother and two sisters. Sooni has three sisters and two brothers surviving -- at least eight of her brothers and sisters died in the wars. Her father had two families, not unusual in her country. Karnes was a protestant, she was reared in the faith of Buddha.

They met in Seoul, Korea, in 1956, where she was working in an installation PX. They were married Sept. 19, 1957, in Seoul. They remained in Korea for another year before being transferred to St. Louis. There the twins were born March 14, 1959.

In the military scheme of things, the family was soon sent to Germany, where they lived three years.

Sooni interrupted the stream of facts.

"That is why my English is not so good," she smiled, "I learned to speak it in Germany....I have a German accent."

From Germany they went to Ft. Polk, La., in 1963, where little Sue Ann was born. They lived there for five years -- by army standards, a long time. While there, Karnes attended schools, was a drill instructor in hand to hand combat, jungle operations and judo. He was a career soldier.

His first duty in Vietnam was in 1968. He was a Sgt. first class then, and returned from combat with recognition as an outstanding soldier.

He had been awarded the bronze star medal, good conduct medal with three bronze loops, national defense service medal with first oak leaf cluster and the Vietnam service medal.

At that time, Sooni and the children moved to Sikeston to be near his family and secure the children until his return. That time he came back.

After seven months at Ft. Polk, once again, Karnes volunteered for duty in Vietnam. This time making Sooni fully aware that he might not return.

"He told me too many times," she said softly, "that he knew he would die doing this fighting. So I knew that he would, someday."

And now the stage has been set for Sgt. 1/c Leslie Leroy Karnes' death by briefly touching on his life.

Feb. 16, 1971, came on Tuesday. Karnes' return home already had been approved. He had held his plane tickets two weeks. He would be in Sikeston in time to celebrate the twin's birthday. In 18 months he planned to retire from the army and buy resort land, rent boats to fishermen, and do a bit of fishing himself.

This time, his body came home, 10 days after his death, accompanied by a close friend, a silver star and the purple heart for gallantry in action. A memorial service was held with military rites. Flowers came from all over the country. The children received scholarships for college. Sooni was informed of the financial and legal assistance available for army widows, and reminded of her continuing commissary privileges. She was urged to keep her identification up to date.

"What was your reaction," I asked, "after the shock of his death?"

She didn't understand my question, for she found it difficult to separate one emotion from another.

"Just crying," she answered, holding out her hands, "then I know soon that I have to take care of everything.... the children."

Sooni's misunderstanding of routine questions prevented her from answering quickly, but she finally related her ideas and decisions about the family's future.

"You know," she said, "you've grown up here (United States) and have had a good life, but you don't appreciate your own country. My husband gave his life for a freedom,...he died for something he thought was right. I'm proud of him. I want to stay here and be the good mother to my children."

Last weekend Sooni took the children on a camping trip. She learned to love water sports from her husband and, as she says, "can't give up fishing." The boys are better than average baseball players and she never misses a game. She describes them as average students, but good athletes.

In March, she and the boys were baptized. They are members of Murray Lane Baptist church.

"I couldn't have made it without the people there," she continued. "I have to trust in the Lord. That's important."

She plans to buy another home in Sikeston, but wants to make the decisions slowly, accurately.

Questions -- the routine ones -- were not so easily asked, for the drama and emotion of a dead husband and father doesn't vanish in five months. It touched me with a quiet hand every time she answered.

"What do you want to remember most about him," I asked.

"When I was sick," she replied, "and if I got mad, he always took the children somewhere."

Sooni is aware that there will forever be someone in her situation, that someone must do the fighting. She does not question her husband's death. The years ahead will not be easy, but she is a determined young woman — busy with the task of bouncing back.

"We had 15 years together," she concluded, "and he left me three pretty children and memories. I will see him again, I know that. Fifteen beautiful years.....and they were all mine. They were very good."

Petitions Started

Seek Road Bond Vote

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Highway Commission announced today it has decided to start an initiative petition campaign next month for a $475 million road bond issue.

Jack Stapleton Sr. of Stanberry, commission chairman, said "the only thing we're asking is that the people have a right to vote on the road bonds."

If the petition campaign is successful in getting 90,000-plus signatures, the proposal could go before voters at a special election or at the 1972 general election.

Stapleton said the commission made the decision Thursday night and said that was the first chance it had to discuss the proposal which had been recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

He said the money would be used to finance the commission's original 12-year intercityinterregional highway plan, including 2,000 miles of improved roads and 12 major bridges. Much of the money would be spent to upgrade existing highways to dual lanes.

Stapleton said the bond issue plan would not include any money for urban mass transit systems, as proposed earlier by the governor.

The 1971 legislature knocked down the governor's recommendation for a highway bond issue because of Senate objections to the high interest costs.

Instead it passed a 2-cent increase in the gasoline tax but the governor vetoed it on the grounds that would not provide enough money for a stepped up construction program and was not tied to a bond issue.

If the voters approve the bond issue, Stapleton said he hoped the legislature would find ways to finance it.

The governor's earlier bond proposal would have been financed by increasing the gas tax from 5 to 7 cents and boosting other highway user fees by enough to equal the revenue of another one cent gas tax.

The 1971 defeat of the governor's road bond proposal was his third loss on a highway improvement program. Twice before he proposed a toll road bond issue but the courts rejected the first one and the voters turned down the second one.

Sen. William B. Waters, DLiberty, whose gas tax increase bill was vetoed this year, has said he would re-introduce such a measure in the 1972 session.

In the past, road bond or gas tax increase proposals have required a statewide citizens' committee to gain voter support, including all segments of the highway industry and automobile users.

Plans for such a campaign organization have not yet been worked out.

Dismissed Election Cases

Jury Scrutiny is Possible

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal grand jury may be asked to look into election fraud cases dismissed by Prosecuting Atty. Arthur Stephenson of Pemiscot County, U.S. Atty. Daniel Bartlett Jr. said Thursday.

Stephenson said he dismissed the remaining 10 of 19 indictments issued last fall because he did not feel he could obtain convictions.

The indictments of election judges and clerks stemmed from irregularities in the August 1970 Democratic primary in the bootheel county.

Six of the 19 pleaded guilty and were given fines and suspended sentences. Stephenson dismissed two other indictments earlier this year.

The prosecutor said he decided to dismiss the remaining indictments after Helen Van Cleve pleaded innocent and was acquitted by a jury after just five minutes of deliberation.

"In my opinion, I tried the strongest and best case I had and further prosecution of the remaining defendants would amount to unwarranted expense to the county when weighed with the possibility of conviction," the prosecutor said.

Bartlett said he was surprised by "the wholesale dismissals."

He said his office received a letter urging federal action from Judge D. J. Merideth Jr., of Pemiscot County last month. Bartlett said the judge expressed the fear that local officials would not follow through on the election fraud cases.

Bartlett said he would discuss the matter with superiors in Washington.

East Prairie Taxes Increased 30 Cents

By SHIRLEY PRITCHETT

EAST PRAIRIE--An ordinance increasing the tax rate on all taxable property in the city from $1.35 to $1.65 per one hundred dollar assessed valuation was adopted last night by the city council.

The 30-cent increase will be used to maintain a sinking fund for payment of the principal and interest on water and sewer system improvement bond.

A proposed operating budget for the 1971-72 fiscal year of $223,090, submitted by City Manager Jim Wilson was approved. Operating expenses for last year totaled $213,088.

Wilson presented a detailed budget form, with a breakdown of operating receipts and estimated expenditures. The form was approved.

Wilson informed the council that Will Carson, operator of the city dump, agreed to sign a one-year contract beginning Jan. 1, 1972, for $100 per month, an increase of $25.

Payment of expenditures totaling $2,206.80 for June was approved. The collector's report showed a total of $10,589.63 collected during June.

The police judge's report showed a total of $820 in assessed fines, with $760 collected. The difference was worked out in city street maintenance.

Councilmen Jones Hedge and Edward Falkoff were authorized to meet with representatives from the McMikle and Shelby Funeral Homes for opinions on developments of the city-owned WOW cemetery. A proposal submitted by Henry Bussey of Sikeston for improvements was tabled.

The council instructed City Attorney Fielding Potashnick to draw up a stop-gap zoning ordinance restricting the opening of commercial businesses outside the fire zone without council approval. An ordinance setting weight limits on city streets will be drawn up by Potashnick for council approval.

A $300 donation to the Little League program and a full page ad in the Mississippi county sesquicentennial official sovenir book for $75 was approved.

Sikeston Man Injured

Three serious injuries and a minor back injury resulted in two traffic mishaps Thursday.

At 7:35 p.m. three miles west of Sikeston on highway 60, a 1969 Dodge traveling north, driven by Dyer Garner, 57, of Sikeston, failed to yield the right of way, the highway patrol said, and was struck by a westbound 1969 Plymouth, driven by Beulah Harris, 52, of McPherson, Kan.

Vella Dunn, 46, of Sikeston, a passenger in the Dodge, sustained a serious injury. The driver of the Plymouth and a passenger, Don Harris, of Mounds Ridge, Kan., sustained serious injuries. They were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

On highway 80, one mile west of East Prairie, at 9:45 a.m., a 1966 Chevrolet going west, driven by Randal Canada, 25, of East Prairie, started to pass a car making a turn, swerved to miss the car, ran off the road, and overturned, the patrol said.

Canada sustained a back injury and was taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

BENTON— The Missouri state tax commission has notified the Scott county court they are satisfied with the county's assessed valuation of $63 million for 1971.

In recent years, the commission has ordered the valuation of Scott county increased and charged that tax assessments were unequal and unfair.

Federal Court Asked About Orton Ouster

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo. (AP)— A petition on its way to the U.S. Supreme Court today asks the high court to review and reverse a Missouri Supreme Court order ousting Clyde Orton as sheriff of Pemiscot County. Orton's attorney, James E. Reeves, mailed the petition Thursday. The State Supreme Court ousted Orton in April. He was accused of permitting widespread violations of state liquor and gambling laws in his southeast Missouri county.

The petition contends Orton was denied due process on four grounds.

He claimed he was found guilty of charges not made in the original ouster suit filed by Missouri Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth.

Orton said he was denied a jury trial.

The finding of the state Supreme Court was made without evidence of guilt, Orton said.

And, the petition said, the Missouri Supreme Court did not hear Orton's case, turning the hearing over to a special commissioner. Orton said he was allowed only 50 minutes for his arguments.

Thad Shelly, a Hayti farmer, was chosen in a special election to complete Orton's term as sheriff.

CAN WE DECIDE WHAT LAWS TO OBEY?

Federal laws that permit the Government to classify some documents as secret are laws like all others. It is not permissable for citizens or companies to pick and choose what law they will obey.

We can think of a number of classified documents we would like to read and publish, not the least being those concerning the assassination of President Kennedy. Many others could produce sensational newspaper editions. It might even be argued that this is in the best interests of the American public, and incidentally of the newspaper that scores the biggest scoops by violations of the law.

It is not by accident that the secret documents made public recently concern the origins of the Vietnam war, rather than the assassination of a President; or Soviet infiltration of the United Nations; or Operations Keelhaul, by which some hundreds of thousands of Russians who wanted to be on our side were forced to return to the Soviet Union after World War II.

It is interesting that the recent publication of documents without authorization represents one more effort to make the United States get out of Vietnam in a rout.

TURNING THE GRINDSTONE

You do not see them very often in this age of power driven machinery, but half a century ago an old grindstone sat behind the woodshed. A 12-year-older did not anticipate the job. It was hard, monotonous work to turn the crank while father bore down hard to take a nick from the scythe.

Scythes had to be kept razor sharp for efficient work and the cutter bar on the mowing machine had many small tringular blades that needed sharpening. Sometimes as a lad sat on an old box and turned, he wondered which was worse - turning the grindstone or cranking the old cedar churn when the cream was obstinate and would not change to butter.

The New England Farmer, July 1860, put it succinctly. "Who will venture to compute the number of sea voyages that have been planned by farmers' sons at the crank of some old grindstone, or of resolutions made to be merchant, mechanic, anything so long as they shall not be obliged to grind dull axes on a miserable grindstone."

A lad knew, of course, that tools had to be sharp to do good work. He had been told that fact many times. But that didn't lessen his feelings as his arm went round and round with the crank. He knew that scythes received nicks and that mower blades dug into humocks and were dulled. The work had to be done and he had to turn the grindstone.

But when Uncle Ben smiled as he watched and said, "Good for you, my boy. It builds character," a boy thought that he could build his character in other and less monotonous ways.

COUNTER-PRODUCTIVE

We've been observing the small but enthusiastic support and interest in a four-day workweek and its resulting three-day weekend in some industries and business.

But before we start riding off in this direction as the cure-all for unemployment and other problems, we find ourselves faced with numerous and notable exceptions.

Very likely, physicians (especially your own family doctor) would be an exception when your family needs him. Then, let's consider the hospitals with their nurses and technicians and the fact that they must look after the ill and afflicted around the clock every day and night of the year. Your pharmacist is on call around the clock to provide prescriptions and medication at any time you need it.

It is time that we ask just how in the heck can we reduce our law enforcement and fire departments to the new utopia of working on a four-day week? Why should the employes of the water company, the Kansas Power & Light and Southwestern Bell have to man their services day and night throughout the workweek? Perhaps you wouldn't miss your daily newspaper, radio and television programs if reduced to just four-days of service a week. Many retailers such as the food suppliers, gas stations, auto repair shops and discount stores are now operating on a six-day and seven-day workweek. Why? Because the shopping public likes it and if you are going to stay in business, you had better meet the public demand.

When you need a plumber or electrician, you'll even pay his overtime rates if the emergency is on the weekends. Any farmer will tell you that there is no such thing as a four-day workweek in planting and harvesting crops or handling livestock.

The list of those whose services and products just don't fit their customers' needs on a four-day basis just grows and grows. And we can assure you that we haven't forgotten the men and women in our armed forces who must defend our country from any enemy and are on call and duty constantly. Even mothers would welcome a four-day workweek, we are sure, but please tell them how?

But since the Federal government owes nearly $400 billion, with out mentioning the billions owed by state and local government, it seems to us that the people of the United States had better be thinking about working more instead of less so we can pay it off. That is possible if we elect public officials who can and will reduce spending beyond our incomes ... and maybe even reduce taxes, when the budgets are realistic again. The founders of America didn't make this country great by shortening the work-week; instead inventive minds and strong workers labored long hours to bring some prosperity and stability to our nation and its people.

FORGETFUL CRITICS

Until only recently, the more progressive a company or industry was in expanding its services the more it was applauded as a community builder and taxpayer. Suddenly a school of thought has developed which seeks to curb industrial growth as a means of protecting the environment. A leading critic of the electric industry now claims that, "Electric utilities created a power shortage by overselling their product through advertising."

The critic failed to mention the long delays of various regulatory agencies in granting approval for construction of needed new generating facilities, nor did he mention the one inescapable problem that overrides all others--population growth. And, he failed to reconcile his charge of "overselling" by the utilities with the insistent pressure for rehabilitation of inner cities and the bringing of higher living standards to depressed areas everywhere. Energy, of course, is a key factor in higher living standards. How else is an electric company to extend its services to those who need it if it does not build new plants and encourage the use of electricity through advertising?

It is not necessary to look far to find why there can be no relaxation in the continuing plans of power companies to expand their facilities. A major investor-owned electric company* that serves Long Island, New York, has released some figures on population growth in its area that show what an electric utility is up against. The total population of this company's service area is greater than the individual population of 24 states and is more than one percent of the total U. S. population. As of January 1, 1970, it served an estimated population of 2,645,726. Since 1960, portions of its service area have registered population growths in excess of 60 percent. Apparently, some critics of the electric industry have forgotten that the first duty of a public utility is to provide service wherever and whenever needed.

Less than 35 percent of the independent businessmen are opposed to employing an ex-convict or parolee to fill a job for which the person is capable of handling, after release from prison.

However, the type of crime for which a person was sent to prison is a factor in determination of the willingness to hire. A person who has served time for burglary is three times more desirable than one convicted of a sex crime.

This data is developing from a special survey being conducted in California by the National Federation of Independent Business in cooperation with state authorities.

California was selected by the Federation for this pilot survey because the state reportedly has the largest prison population of any state in the nation, has a high crime rate, and a cost of maintaining a prisoner that runs as high as $3,500 per year.

But although approximately two-thirds of the independent business proprietors questioned to date say they would not be adverse to hiring a released prisoner, per se, there is a wide diversity of opinion on the type of released offender that would be acceptable.

Of those who report they would hire an ex-convict, 57 percent say they would hire an ex-burglar, 53 percent say they would employ an ex-robber, and 36 percent report they would hire a former drug addict. But less than 20 percent say they would be willing to hire anyone that had been convicted of a sex offense.

The Federation survey is also revealing a reluctance in the past of the independent businessmen to participate in the type of prisoner-work program that has been espoused by many students of penology.

Only 42 percent currently say they would be willing to hire prisoners which are serving time, with the prisoners working at private employment during the days, returning to prison at night and on weekends.

On another section of the Federation survey the businessmen by a 2 to 1 margin express support for shortening the prison terms for offenders if the present available level of supervision and services for released offendors is increased.

AN ENVIRONMENTAL LIABILITY

A number of municipalities have passed ordinances making new overhead installations of power lines illegal. By the simple process of passing an ordinance, these communities apparently hope to achieve an environment more to their liking, and some city officials hope to gain favor with voters. The action of these communities is an excellent illustration of the wide gap between fiction and fact in matters relating to our environment.

An official of the investor-owned power company* charged with the responsibility of serving several communities under the prohibition of such ordinances explained to community representatives the facts of life about undergrounding power lines. In the area involved, this company had budgeted $51.5 million for the next five years for the installation of new lines. Said the official, "If all those lines were to be installed underground--just in this five-year period -- that cost would be $303.7 million. that is an increase of $252 million . . The revenue necessary to support this. . . would require a rate increase of at least 40 per cent to our. . . customers!"

Such gigantic added burden in all fairness would have to be borne by the customers of the areas involved. Also, the official went on to point out, "We want to be a good citizen and we want to make as many installations underground as can be justified. At the same time we have neither the right nor the authority to make uneconomic or fiscally irresponsible investments. In addition, there are tremendous technological problems associated with. . .underground installation. . ." Laws that fail to take into account cost and technological capabilities are more of an environmental liability than an asset.

A chrome hard-hat serves as the body and a giant lunch bucket is the gas tank.

Naturally, it turns both right and left, as a political machine should.

RECESSION MAY BE BETTER

Those who feel a little more inflation might help cure the recession might pause to consider what has happened in housing. Inflation and the consequent declining value of the dollar have pushed the price of a new home beyond the reach of a great many people. Inflated construction costs have brought home building to a virtual stop in some parts of the country, and "a little more inflation" would help bring it to a complete standstill.

Pursuit of the philosophy of a little inflation has reduced the value of the dollar by something like two thirds within the memory of many now living. The moral of this may be that we can live with a little recession a lot easier than we can live with a little inflation.

Aboard a ship a magician was entertaining the guests -- all except a parrot hanging nearby. Everything, including a pigeon that was made to disappear, was greeted by a shout of "Faker!" from the bird. Suddenly an explosion destroyed the ship, and the parrot landed on a raft occupied by the magician. After two days of merely sitting and staring at the man, the bird finally admitted: "All right you win! What did you do with the ship?"

Auto Safety Devices Pay Off

In 1970, for the first time in 25 years, the nation's economic loss from highway accidents took a downturn.

The reduction was nearly $375 million from 1969, reports the Insurance Information Institute. The total economic loss, however, was still a staggering $16.2 billion in such categories at lost wages, medical expenses and property damage.

A drop in deaths and injuries, the first in a decade, was the key factor. Final traffic figures for 1970 show that although there were 91,000 more accidents than in 1969, the number of deaths (55,300) declined by 1,100, or 2 per cent, and injuries (nearly 5 million) were down by 26,872, or .5 per cent.

The good news is tempered by the fact that the death and accident toll recorded an increase in December 1970 as compared with December 1969, reversing the downtrend, at least temporarily.

But an overall decrease in deaths and injuries in 1970 in the face of an increasing number of accidents, indicates that while driving habits have not improved, improved automobile safety features are having an effect. These include collapsible steering wheels, ballooning windshields, the elimination of protruding knobs and handles inside cars and, of course, seat belts.

A TRUE FISH STORY

The seas have been a source for material and inspirational resources since before the dawn of history. Food, fun, transport of people and goods, and highways to adventure always have been of major importance to humanity's relationship with the sea. All these still retain their importance, if anything more so now than ever.

The Louisiana Gulf Coast in 1950 provided a catch of 400 million pounds of fish and shellfish, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service. For the next 10 years, exploration and drilling for oil, a newer usage, increased. Yet, by 1960, the Louisiana fish and shellfish catch had doubled to 800 million pounds. From hearing the almost-hysterical outbursts of faddists in certain academic and political circles, it would seem impossible for such large catches to continue if oil operations continued.

Since 1960, the Louisiana fish and shellfish catch has for the first time passed every other state in volume. The 1970 catch was 1.1 billion pounds, the first time any state reported more than one billion pounds.

Earnest study and good work for a quarter of a century made this modern miracle possible. Louisianans appreciate the tax revenues and wealth their oil resources have brought the state's people. They also appreciate their tasty seafood and the wealth it brings. They need them both, as do we all. They will see that the sea continues to provide both. HLH

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

WOMEN SAY NO:
Nixon's Labor Secretary Sees More Monday Holidays But Not Swing To Quixotic Four-Day Week

by Victor Riesel

Suddenly a few months ago there flared across the land a proposal for a four-day week -- made up of 10-hour days. It took hold in a handful of firms among the millions of American corporations.

It intrigued some labor leaders because they saw it as possibly intriguing young workers. And as a short cut to the 32-hour week -- four days at 8-hour shifts.

Though Secretary of Labor Jim Hodgson is self-effacing, albeit one of the most popular such Cabinet officers this nation has had, he was just the man to ask if the famed, well-publicized four-day (10-hour day) week has a chance to take hold or is it a fad. Mr. Hodgson here speaks for himself. I do believe he thinks it's a fad and that leisure time will come in blocs of new holidays. Here is his view written especially for this column:

by
James D. Hodgson
Secretary of Labor

Washington:-- Labor versus leisure is an old problem. How much time should we spend acquiring the good things of life? How much time should we spend enjoying them? How should we divide our time between working and resting?

For centuries we followed the divine example of working six days and resting on the seventh. The five day, 40 hour workweek is a creature of comparatively recent times. There is nothing sacred about it. Why not arrange it so that we could have three days a week off instead of two?

This is the proposal of proponents of the four-day, 40-hour week. It's an intriguing idea, already being tried out on an experimental basis by some 100 American companies. Enthusiasts are vocal. Experience is mixed.

Proponents include both employers and employees. For employers reputed advantages are increased productivity, improved morale, and assorted other benefits. For employees it means a 20 per cent reduction in commuter time to and from the job and leisure time in weekly blocks of three days instead of two.

It also means working a 10-hour day -- or a day approaching 10 hours.

Is it worth it? Many employees report that it is. A recent Gallup poll indicates that a high proportion of men like the idea, particularly younger men. On the other hand, this preference is not shared by women, who voted against it by a 2 to 1 margin.

One concludes that reactions are determined by life style. The sports buff or travel enthusiast may think the extra daily work hours a small price to pay for the luxury of three days of leisure. Not so the working mother who knows that the current eight-hour day leaves her little enough time to get the family off in the morning and the dinner on at night.

The returns are far from in, but we in the Labor Department are following developments with keen interest. We are getting many questions. We are being asked about State laws that prohibit women working for more than eight or nine hours a day. And we are being asked about the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act and the Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act, both of which require premium overtime after eight hours a day for covered employees. These laws establish eight hours as the standard workday on most federal government procurement contracts.

We want to respond to the wishes of employers and employees, but we also need to probe more deeply into many questions before recommending legislative changes to Congress. High among our concerns is whether the longer working day might have any effect upon the health and safety of the American worker. And we have other questions – the effect on moonlighting, for example, or what the new workweek structure would mean to such groups as part-time working mothers.

One of the most interesting questions arising from current enthusiasm for the four-day, 40-hour week is whether it signals an interest not only in restructuring available leisure time but also in adding to our total leisure. The American worker has traditionally divided his productivity gains between shorter worktime and higher real earnings, with emphasis on the latter. Since World War II, the tendency to opt for higher living standards rather than reduction of working hours has been somewhat more pronounced than in previous decades. Much of the movement for increased leisure that did occur duing this period came in the form of more holidays or longer vacations.

Are we now seeing a puch for more total leisure? With all the current complaints about the evils of striving for ever greater production and the search for a more satisfying life, it might be easy to come to this conclusion. But I do not think so. Maintaining high standards of living is still important to most American citizens. And accomplishing all the environmental, health, and social improvements as we see ahead will call for a great deal of work.

The reasonable conclusion is that we will see a continuation of recent historical trends, with only a gradual and modest extension of total leisure time. We will continue to take an overwhelming part of our productivity gains in higher living standards.

But it is also reasonable to conclude that any additional leisure we do achieve will come in block form, just as the four-day, 40-hour week proposal is a proposal for block leisure. This kind of leisure seems increasingly to be the sort that people want.

One way to achieve this is by the creation of additional Monday holidays. Today nearly all American industry operates on a four-day week for 10 per cent of the year now that five of our national holidays fall on Monday. It is easy to envision additional Monday holidays over a period of time, possibly to a point where each month would offer a three-day weekend.

Whether or not total workweek hours decline, it is a good bet that rearranging leisure time into blocks is the trend of the future. It may come from restructuring the present workweek, from additional weekend holidays, or even from longer vacations. It looks as though this is what today's working men -- and a lot of working women -- want.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON--Such popular brand-name drugs as Compoz, Excedrin PM, No-Doz, Nyquil, Nytol, Quiet World, Sleep-Eze, Sominex and Vivarin will come under Senate attack this month.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., will challenge the efficacy of these pills, potions and palliatives that are supposed to calm the nervous, cheer the depressed, rouse the drowsy, relieve the sleepless and make the dull sparkle.

His Senate Small Business subcommittee will hold hearings July 21, 22 and 23. Medical experts, psychiatrists and government specialists have been invited to tell what they know about "mood drugs."

Nelson's preliminary investigation indicates that some of the most ballyhooed "mood" medicines are really old remedies such as caffeine or new remedies wrongly used such as anti-histamines.

(Anti-histamines are put in some sleeping pills not to fight allergies, for which they are medically prescribed, but to cause drowsiness.)

Other pills are potent but bring only temporary results. Side effects not mentioned in the small print on the label have also been reported. There is less clinical data on over-the-counter drugs, Nelson has found, than on prescription drugs.

But Nelson is even more concerned over the "drug culture" that has grown up around today's tranquilizers and amphetamines. Children exposed to drug advertising grow up believing that an over-the-counter pill can change their moods and solve their problems.

The giant pharmaceutical firms have been invited to send spokesmen to Nelson's hearing. At this writing, they had not replied. They maintain, of course, that their drugs are safe and effective when taken according to directions.

--OIL AND VIETNAM--

We have tried to pin down rumors that the oil barons encouraged U.S. involvement in Vietnam to protect the offshore oil reserves for them to exploit.

It's no secret that Lyndon Johnson was close to Texas oil interests and that he ran interference for them in Congress. The Pentagon Papers also make clear that LBJ, as President, was preparing to intervene heavily in Vietnam before the August, 1964, Gulf of Tonkin incident.

Signs of oil off the Vietnam coast were discovered as early as 1955. But it wasn't until 1968, four years after the U.S. build-up in Vietnam, that Amper Corporation, an American consortium, began serious explorations in Vietnam waters. Amper conducted its explorations in behalf of Standard Oil of New Jersey and Indiana, Mobil Oil, Gulf Oil, Atlantic Richfield, Phillips Petroleum, Tenneco, Continental Union Oil of California, Dutch Shell and British Petroleum.

Amper estimated that the shores of Southeast Asia contained more oil reserves than the Middle East. The explorations have indicated a huge seabed oil reservoir at the mouth of the Mekong River.

We have talked to inside sources and examined confidential documents in our search for evidence that the oil boys may have been behind President Johnson's decision to send troops to Vietnam. As far as we can learn, the oil interests had nothing to do with LBJ's Vietnam decisions.

Indeed, the government has refused to grant the oil companies any financial guarantees to encourage drilling in Vietnamese waters. AID Administrator John Hannah, in secret meetings, has urged a guarantee to the oil companies but without success.

Mailing Lists--Military regulations strictly forbid the release of names and addresses for "commercial solicitation purposes." The Army Times has been offered as high as $10,000 for its subscription list, but all the service magazines keep their lists under lock and key. C. W. Van Orman, an enterprising retired Army officer, has gotten around the ban by advertising as a "military" employment agency, offering jobs for servicemen. Then he sells the names and addresses to insurance companies for $2.50 a name. Van Orman, reached at his Seaside, Calif., home, acknowledged his personnel placement ads used to bring in about 10,000 applicants per month. He found jobs for only seven or eight each month, compiled the rest into mailing lists. The recession has crimped his operation. He has reduced his advertising, he said, and receives only 3,000 to 4,000 applications a month. But this is plenty. Complained Van Orman: "I can't sell anywhere near the names I receive."

Under the Dome--Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., wears his bathrobe around the house but not for comfort alone. He keeps cookies in the pockets....Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has such a weakness for rhubarb that his staff gives him rhubarb pies in place of birthday cakes. He also drinks milk shakes for energy....Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., has a passion for frozen custard. A recent auto trip to West Virginia was routed so he would pass several Tastee Freeze or Dairy Queen stands on the way. He also drinks a lot of diet Pepsi....Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., won't touch carbonated drinks. He believes they're unhealthy, quenches his thirst instead with fruit juices.

NEW YORK (AP) — Everyone yearns for a perfect world, but this is a hopeless hope.

There is no perfect world this side of the pearly gates, and there never will be.

Then how about a better world? Ah, there is an achievable dream. There are millions of ways the world can be made better, and each man has his own formula for it.

Here are a few suggested steps that might help the human race and the planet earth to hum in harmony instead of screech in long discord:

Each husband could have two wives if he willed it—one to act as his housekeeper and second mother, the other to act as his girld friend.

Each wife could hav two husbands if she willed it—one to pay her bills, the other to give her thrills.

All teen-agers would be taken from parents at 13, kept and educated in vast government pens, and returned home at 21 with a college diploma and a job.

Cocktail parties would be banned except between the hours of 5 and 7:30 p.m. on Saturday nigi

Any member of a government body which imposed a new tax on the people would have to pay five times that amount himself.

No tax would be imposed which required payment in pennies, and the penny itself, now a nuisance coin, would be abolished.

Every business office would have enough couches for any employe to take an hour's nap after lunch if he chose to.

No more articles made of plastic would be allowed to come on the market except after a full government hearing.

All heavyweight boxing festivals would be billed as shows or exhibitions rather than as countsts, bouts or fights.

Anyone who wanted to enlist in any of the armed services would have the right to, no matter what his physical or mental condition.

Any American who wished to emigrate to another country would have his fare paid there by a grateful U.S. government.

Muggers caught out on the streets after dark would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

These suggestions, if adopted, might not turn the world into a garden of delight, but they would remove some blemishes and curb a few unneccesary annoyances.

Quake Takes 63 Lives

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A severe earthquake rolled across central Chile during the night and the government announced today the toll stood at 63 dead and 317 injured.

Chile's main port of Valparaiso on the Pacific coast appeared to be among the cities hardest hit. Rescue officials there reported 25 dead and about 300 injured.

Information on damage and the number of victims still was sketchy, with many communities isolated by landslides.

The Thursday night quake also was felt through much of Argentina across the Andres, but no casualties or major damage were reported there.

Communications were still shaky or disrupted with the areas north of Santiago that were hit hardest, and there was no word of property damage. It was feared that the casualty toll would rise as more reports came in.

Seismographs in Santiago and abroad measured the quake at a force of around 7 on the Richter scale, but government officials said it registered 10 in the areas hardest hit. This is an unusually high reading—the Alaska quake of 1964 registered 8.25—and there was speculation that the report might be an exaggeration.

Chile's four central provinces, where four million people live, were declared an emergency zone, and police and armed forces moved in to provide food and medical relief.

President Salvador Allende went on the air and pleaded for calm. He planned a helicopter tour of the disaster area today.

Seismographs abroad located the tremor's epicenter near Valparaiso, Chile's second largest city, on the coast 60 miles northwest of the capital. But the interior minister said the quake was strongest in the towns of Illapel, Barbala and Salamanca, 125 miles north of Santiago.

The earthquake struck at 11:03 p.m. as most of Santiago's 3 million people were eating their usual late-night dinners. Frightened crowds poured into the streets, and the power company cut off the electricity to prevent fires. The lights were out for nearly an hour, and telephone service and international communications were cut for an hour and a half.

Walls cracked and windows broke downtown buildings. Several water mains broke, sending water spurting into the cold air of the winter night. Cornices crashed down from buildings. Panicky motorists injured several persons in the dark.

President Allende went on the air immediately to reassure the public; the populace listened on transister radios. "Stay in your homes," the president said. "Take care of your families." But crowds huddled in the streets.

There was a panicky rush for exists in a movie theater. One man died of a heart attack, and about 30 other persons were injured. Walls of a police station fell in, injuring two officials.

Allende sent Minister of State Jaime Suarez to Valparaiso to investigate the situation. The long mountain tunnel of the Santigao-Valparaiso highway was reported blocked.

South of Santiago the force of the quake was much less. In Concepcion, the country's third largest city, 350 miles south of the capital, damage was light.

Chile lies along the perimeter of the so-called "ring of fire" along the Andes and is hit periodically by earthquakes. Minor tremors are fairly common.

Chile's last major quake occurred in 1965 when the shocks broke a dam north of the capital. Four hundred persons were buried under mud and water that roared down on a mining town.

One of South America's worst earthquakes also occurred in Chile in 1960. The shocks in the southern part of the country continued for 10 days, an estimated 5,700 persons were killed and thousands of square miles were devastated.

Surprise Peace Shift Pondered by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. officials say the Nixon administration is pondering the significance of a surprise new shift in the latest peace offensive launched by Vietnamese Communist leaders.

The shift is in the form of a demand for the ouster of only President Nguyen Van Thieu from any future South Vietnamese goverment ready to negotiate an end of war.

Previously North Vietnamese and Viet Cong leaders had insisted that not only Thieu, but Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky and Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem, as well, could be unacceptable in a post-war government.

"For years Communist delegates at the Paris peace talks have been calling for removal of the 'Thieu-Ky-Khiem clique,'" one diplomatic informant said. "They practically pronounced 'Thieu-Ky-Kiem' as one word. Now they've begun speaking only of Thieu."

The shift in the Communist position emerged after Madame Nguyen Thi Binh presented the Viet Cong's latest peace package at the Paris conference July 1. The proposal was for release of all prisoners held by the Communists in the North and South by the year's end, concurrent with withdrawal of all U.S. troops. Her precise words:

"The U.S. government must really respect the South Vietnam people's rights to self-determination, put an end to its interference in the internal affairs of South Vietnam, cease backing the bellicose group headed by Nguyen Van Thieu at present in office in Saigon, and stop all maneuvers, including tricks on elections, aimed at maintaining the puppet Nguyen Van Thieu."

Five days later Le Duc Tho, senior North Vietnamese representative in Paris, endorsed Madame Binh's proposal and in an interview with the New York Times hammered away at Thieu – and Thieu only. He said in part:

"Although it is not admitted...the whole world knows that Thieu has been put in power by the U.S. administration. And the United States will have the decisive voice in the forthcoming elections.

"Therefore if Mr. Nixon is really disposed to settle the whole problem of the war...the question of change of the ruling group now in office in Saigon–headed by Thieu–is in the power of the United States---The forthcoming election in South Vietnam is an opportunity for Mr. Nixon to change Thieu."

Authorities in the State Department have no doubt this subtle Communist move has significance. But just how much significance will be known only when some frank face-to-face talking begins between negotiators for the two sides.

But meantime, several interpretations have been offered by administration experts as to motives of the Vietnamese Communists in changing their position:

— An effort to isolate the inflexible Thieu who, in the 1967 election, won 35 per cent of the votes.

— A bid to deepen the already considerable split between Thieu and Vice-President Ky who, in the past, has boasted of his Northern origins.

— An attempt to advance the prospects of neutralist Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh who led the 1963 coup that ousted President Ngo Dinh Diem. Ky and Minh are opposing Thieu in the October elections.

— A signal to President Nixon that if only he would arrange for Thieu's electoral defeat, there would be a basis for an acceptable negotiated settlement. In this context Le Duc Tho was explicit in asserting his belief Nixon could, if he chooses, do just that.

Redistricting Faces New Wrinkle

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (AP) — A new wrinkle faced the 20-member commission as the battle to revamp Missouri's 163 House of Representative districts resumed today.

If the 10 proposals from Missouri's 10 congressional districts were accepted, there would be 164 districts instead of the required 163.

The extra district seems to be in the controversial 7th Congressional District which includes Greene County and the city of Springfield. Trouble erupted Thursday in that area as the two commissioners—one Democrat and one Republican—locked horns.

"I cannot understand it," said Ted Scott, R-Buffalo.

He said he thought a mistake had been made in drawing up the proposed 7th District which according to his figures should have 17 House seats.

Scott accused the commissioners of "being lazy" and of "fussing when they should have been drawing maps."

Scott said he had been told that a statewide map had been agreed to all except the 7th District. He said other commissioners had threatened to go home if he does not yield a district.

The commission set noon today as the deadline to agree on a tentative map to be filed with the secretary of state or give up on the job and turn it over to the six Missouri Supreme Court commissioners.

Richard Howe, R-Canton, chairman, said late Thursday he was still hopeful an agreement of some kind could be reached, but was discouraged at attempts to keep the 20 members in executive session on a continuous basis.

"I cannot see how any of those commissioners," he said, "would want to turn the task over to the Supreme Court commissioners."

He said a computerized redistricting map would alter existing districks drastically, perhaps cutting through wards and neighborhoods without regard to voter interests.

Legislators worred about the ultimate makeup of their own districts badgered the redistricting commission all day Thursday.

Another Rock Music Star Dies

PARIS (AP) — Jim Morrison, lead singer of The Doors and a star of the acid rock scene, died in Paris last Saturday and was buried Wednesday in Pere Lachaise cemetery.

The death of the 27-year-old entertainer was announced early today in Los Angeles by his manager William Siddons, and confirmed by U.S. officials in the French capital.

The cause of death was not given on the official listing, but Siddons said he "died peacefully of natural causes."

Siddons attended the funeral and took Morrison's wife, Pamela, back to Los Angeles. The Morrisons had no children.

Max Fink, the singer's personal lawyer, said he had been told that Morrison suffered either a heart attack or died from pneumonia.

Morrison's parents, Rear Adm. and Mrs. George Stephen Morrison of Arlington, Va., said they had talked Thursday with relatives on the West Coast who had heard nothing unusual about their son.

In a statement to newsmen on his arrival in Los Angeles, Siddons said he had "Just returned from France where I attended the funeral of James Morrison. Jim was buried in a simple ceremony with only a few friends present."

Siddons said Morrison's death "was kept quiet because those of us who knew him .... wanted to avoid all the notoriety and circus-like atmosphere that surrounded the deaths of Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix."

Siddons said Morrison had seen a doctor in Paris last Saturday about a respiratory problem and "complained of this problem on the day of his death."

The singer had been in France with his wife since March writing a movie screenplay following a tour of Europe and North Africa, Siddons said.

Born in Melbourne, Fla., and a graduate of UCLA, Morrison and The Doors, based in Hollywood, rose to rock fame in 1967 with the release of an eventual million copy seller, "Light My Fire."

As a singer, Morrison was described by one rock critic as "cold, insolent, evil, slightly mad and seemed to be in some sort of hypnotic trance."

In Miami, Fla., in March, 1969, Morrison was accused of lewd and lascivious conduct for allegedly exposing himself before a huge crowd during a performance by The Doors. He was found innocent of the charge. A court, however, found him guilty of using obscene language during the show.

The incident led to a later "Rally for Decency" in Florida which features other singers and television performers.

N.Y. Workers Admit Regular on Job Drug Usage

NEW YORK (AP)--About 101,000 employed persons who live in New York State admit using marijuana, LSD, methedrine or heroin on a regular basis during work hours, the state Narcotic Addiction Control Commission says.

The report, released Tuesday, said at least 362,000 working people in the state used illegal drugs regularly--at least six times a month--on or off the job.

Cotton Planting Biggest Since '65

WASHINGTON (AP(— The Agriculture Deprtment announced Thursday that farmers planted 12,398,600 acres to cotton this year, 4 per cent more than in 1970 and the most since 1965.

There was no estimate of 1971 cotton production. That will be made by the department on Aug. 9.

The acreage estimate compares with 12.1 million acres indicated last March in a projection based on what farmers said they intended to plant for 1971 production.

The Crop Reporting Board said growers in the Southeast planted 1,525,000 acres, up 2 per cent from last year. Plantings were up in each of the Southeastern states except Alabama where the acreage is the same as in 1970.

Cotton planting in the Mississippi Delta state is up 9 per cent from last year, the report said. Increases range from 5 to 15 per cent above last season, including gains in Louisiana of 15 per cent; Mississippi 11 per cent; Missouri 8 per cent; and Tennessee and Arkansas each up 5 per cent.

The Texas crop acreage is 2 per cent more than last year but plantings in Oklahoma are down 11 per cent because of drought in the western part of the state.

The planted acreage is 7 per cent larger from last year in California and 2 per cent more in Arizona. Plantings in New Mexico are down 2 per cent.

Nixon administration farm officials and cotton industry leaders are seeking larger output of the crop this year to help rebuild diminishing reserve supplies.

Production last year was about 10.2 million bales.

Highway Department Pay Hike Approved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The State Highway Commission unanimously approved a salary increase today for most employes of the department. The increase will be included in July pay checks.

The boost will be on a "graduated scale," the commission said, with low pay employes getting the biggest per cent of the increases. The percentages will range from about 15 per cent to 5 per cent.

Commission Chairman Jack Stapleton Sr. of Stanberry said the pay increases were granted to offset effects of increased cost of living on employes' take-home pay.

The department has about 6,800 full time employes.

Earlier this year, the commission met with the House Appropriations Committee to settle some differences about departmental salaries. The committee was irate that previously recommended pay hikes had been ignored and legislators said that was a violation of legislative intent.

A more amiable understanding reportedly was reached as a result of the meeting. The appropriations committee had refused to hear testimony on the department's budget until the meeting.

Three Shot In $142,000 Brink's Haul

NEW YORK (AP)—Two Brink's guards and an elevator starter were shot and wounded today by bandits who made off with $142,000 in a payday robber today at the city's Municipal Building, police said.

The fleeing holdup men raced to a getaway car and escaped across the Brooklyn Bridge.

The Brink's men were delivering money to the Municipal Credit Union office on the third floor of the building.

The two guards stepped into an automatic elevator on the first floor and were joined by the elevator starter, while others were asked to step out, usual procedure in delivering money, police said.

At the second floor, the elevator stopped, opened and two waiting gunmen opened fire, wounding the three occupants, police said.

The gunmen grabbed the cash bundle, police said and ran down a marble stairway and into the streets of the city government complex in lower Manhattan.

The wounded men were reported in satisfactory condition at a hospital.

Debbie Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Jones of Route three, received first prize in the Sew-with-Cotton contest Sunday.

The district contest was held earlier in the year and the top three girls of each class modeled at the fourth of July picnic at Hayti.

Miss Jones received first place in the Misses class and was given a $50 savings bond.

She will now go to Memphis and model her dress for the Southern Cotton Producers convention and will receive a gold watch.

She will be a senior at Matthews high school in the fall.

Save Money on Your Wardrobe

NEW YORK — (NEA) — If you've got the fashion blues you can revitalize your wardrobe without spending a small fortune. The secret is to screen the clothes you have and shop carefully for those you need. Today women are less inclined to submissively follow the latest fashion decree. They wear what they like and what looks right on them.

This is the opinion of Ethel Mooring, fashion executive of Peck & Peck, the nationwide specialty shops. She has designed a money-saving plan that helps to organize what you have and to figure out what you really need. Here's how it works:

Set aside some free time to go through your wardrobe.

Start by listing recent activities you've engaged in during the last month. Include occasional social events such as dinners, cocktail parties, PTA meetings, etc. Jot down the type of clothes worn and those you need for these occasions.

Try on everything in your closet and determine if your things are in good condition, fit, and most of all, whether or not you're tired of them.

Read labels for special cleaning and laundering instructions. Ask sales personnel to help if you have questions.

Women's Retirement Age Ruled On

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman cannot be forced to retire at an earlier age than a man, the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled.

The unanimous decision Wednesday by a three-judge panel held that a retirement plan based on sex violates the 1964 Civil Rights Act and is "tantamount to discharge."

The court ruled in the case of Ann Bartmess who sued a South Bend, Ind., brewery, Drewrys Limited U.S.A., and Local 275, International Union of United Brewery and Distillery Workers of American [illegible] and a contract that held the retirement age for women at 62 and that for men at 65.

Ann Landers

Other Woman Tells Her Side of the Story

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest the letter about "The Other Woman." It's time you printed the other side of the story, Ann. There IS one, you know. Perhaps it doesn't coincide with your concept of morality, but it DOES exist and I wish you'd be fair and print it.

Only the Other Woman knows what it's like to be in love with a married man who can't (or won't) get a divorce. I am not only the Other Woman, I am also a divorcee with three children. In this town I am labeled Brand X. Being the Other Woman puts me on the outside of everything, but I have an added stigma which is even worse. Last year I gave birth to his out-of-wedlock child.

I've known for six rocky years how wrong and futile this affair is but I loved him deeply and I let my heart rule my head. Now I am hoplessly trapped. I can't lead a normal life. People whisper behind my back. No decent man would consider asking me out. Very few women will associate with me. I am hungry for adult company. If it weren't for my kids, I'd lose my mind. So you see, Ann, we are not all tramps and she-devils. We are real people who took a wrong turn in the road and ended up on a -- Dead End Street

Dear D.E.S.: Thank you for writing. It's too late to offer advice, dear, so I offer you my condolences.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to complain about your frivolus reply to the short-haired waitress who complained because she has to wear a hairnet while a long-haired fellow who works with her does not. Your answer was funny but not helpful. It also displayed a wealth of ignorance about the health codes and consumer protection laws across the United States. ALL food handlers are required by law to control their hair in a way that will assure the consumer that hair will be kept out of the food and off the contact surfaces.

Since the advent of long hair styles on males it has become increasingly difficult for operators of food service establishments to convince ALL personnel that they must protect the consumers against hair in the food, using whatever means necessary to do so. Your answer didn't help. -- C.B.S., Dept. of Health, Minnesota

Dear C.B.S.: Thanks for the come-uppance. I deserved it. If the law says hairnets for everybody, regardless of sex, that settles it. Come to think of it, I'd rather see a fella in a snood than a hair in my soup.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband had a brief and unhappy marriage when he was much younger. They had one child 11 months after the wedding, so you see it was not a shotgun affair.

The problem is that my mother-in-law has an enormous picture of my husband's son in her living room. It is prominently displayed and impossible to miss. Since it is her only grandchild I can see why she would be proud of him. Soon I will be bringing my family to his mother's place, and they do not know about this child. I never felt it was anyone's business to mention his former marriage.

I realize the picture must stay. I have no right to ask my mother-in-law to remove it. My husband has told me I can say whatever I wish. Can you help me find the words? --- New Orleans Dilemma

Dear New: A girl who marries a divorced man should tell her family that he had a previous marriage -- and they certainly should be informed of any children that resulted from the marriage. I urge you to tell them BEFORE they see the picture and ask, "Who is that?" -- or you might be reviving some fainted relatives in your mother-in-law's house.

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing

50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

GOD'S SALVATION POWER

Romans 1:16 is a great verse for removing our shame from and establishing our faith in the miracle -working power of Christ's gospel. It is no less than Paul's own testimony to the good news. It can shape your convictions.

The sun is God's provision for light, heat, and energy. The rain is God's provision for water, refreshing, and vegetation. The earth is God's provision for man's habitation. Healing is God's provision for man's health. Language is God's provision for man's communication. This is only a start, but in every case what God provides is completely adequate.

Paul says the gospel is God's provision for salvation. He even says it is God's powerful provision to this end. Being a "power" for salvation, it can overcome ignorance, unbelief, sinfulness, worldliness, indifference, anxiety, pride, and every other obstacle in the sinner's way. If all of God's provisions are adequate, how much more shall God's "power" produce the desired result?

Further, we are not ashamed to confess that the sun gives light, heat, and energy because the truth is established among us. We believe it and that settles it. So Paul believed the gospel is God's salvation power because he used it. He saw that it produced what God promised, and the fear of failure and embarrassment were gone. He proclaimed. God produced. He believed. He was not ashamed. It can happen to you!

'Gang Preacher' to Speak at Cape Arena

CAPE GIRARDEAU – Dave Wilkerson, the famed author of the cross and the switchblade, and known around the world as the "Gang Preacher," will be speaking at Arena Park at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

The public is invited.

Wilkerson is widely known for his successful work among drug addicts and gang members in New York ghettos. His book, The Cross And The Switchblade, written about his work, has sold over six million copies.

In 1958 Wilkerson became famous in the New York area for interrupting the Michael Farmer murder trial. Seven young gang members were on trial for the brutal murder of polio victim, Michael Farmer. In an attempt to help the young gang members, Wilkerson interrupted the court session and was promptly dragged from the courtroom. The ensuing publicity made the young minister from Pennsylvania a hero among New York's 350 teenage gangs. The gangs were soon allowing him to visit and speak in their hideouts, from which came the nickname, "The Gang Preacher."

Dave Wilkerson is the founder of New York Teen Challenge, one of America's most successful drug addiction programs. Teen Challenge claims an amazing 74 per cent cure rate among heroin users who have completed its program.

Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center, Inc. owns 262 acres of land 3 miles north of Cape Girardeau, Missouri. This was given by an interested

Sr. Babe Ruth

When you are number one its great, but when you are number two, you try harder. Such was the case last night in Junior Babe Ruth baseball play. Second Place Harts Standard slipped past previously unbeaten Elks in a nine inning contest. Harts' Bill Wake scored in the ninth to give his team a 3-2 victory.

In the nightcap Lindsey M & H defeated Leible Implement 9-2. Ed McDowell fanned 13 Leible batters and collected the victory.

Last night's first game went nine innings before three straight singles by Harts sent Wake in to score the winning run. Wake's single was followed by a hit from Pickett and the game winning hit by Dan Lefler.

Harts blasted Elks pitcher Blankenship for 12 hits and scored first with a run in the opening inning. Lefler, Vaught, Collier, and Wake all connected for two hits in the Harts battery.

Gary Vaught handled the pitching chores for the winners. In the Elks lineup, six batsmen connected for the six Elks' tallies. Randy Reynolds added the team's extra base hit, a double in the second inning.

Lindsey scored five runs in the opening frame and added three more runs in the second to jump into an early 8-0 advantage over Leible. Leibles' one run in the sixth and one run in the seventh haulted the M & H bid for shut out.

McDowell held Leible to only two hits in the game, a double from Julian Moore and a single from George Hensley.

Lindsey connected for four hits off of Lieble hurlers, Colwick and Hei. M & H batsmen Walker, McDowell, LaPlant, and Melton belted Lindsey's hits.

Devine Balks At Pro 'De-Humanizing' Tag

EDITORS NOTE: Tommy Prothro has his Los Angeles Rams in training camp today and next week it's Dan Devine's turn with his Green Bay Packers as both rookie coaches begin preparations for their first season in the National Football League. Prothro and Devine sat down with Associated Press sports Writers Mike Rathet and Will Grimsley for a roundtable discussion of the challenge inherent in their first crack at the pros.

By MIKE RATHET
and WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Is football de-humanizing as its critics claim?

Not to rookie pro coaches Tommy Prothro of the Los Angeles Rams and Dan Devine of the Green Bay Packers, each of whom asks a pertinent question in answering the critics.

"Is discipline de-humanizing?" Prothro asks.

"Where else in the United States is there a more humanizing thing?" asks Devine.

But those are only part of their emotion-filled answers in this final part of a three-part series in which Prothro and Devine reveal the challenges of their new jobs.

The questions and answers:

Grimsley: You've both heard or read about the word "dehumanizing" as applied to football by Dave Meggyesy and other players. Do you think football has gotten to a point where it's de-humanizing?

Prothro: To start with—these people that are attacking athletics or many other things whip you with nomenclature before you start. Now I know you're for athletics, but yet they've sold you on a word already—'de-humanizing.' What have we done that's de-humanizing? Is discipline de-humanizing? If that's true, then we've de-humanized them.

But it used to be that you said football had discipline. Now you say football is dehumanizing. There's a lot of difference. We've added a word to discipline too in Meggyesy's and George Sauer's write-ups—it's 'child-like discipline.' This is ridiculous. I have never known a child that had any discipline at all. It takes a pretty mature human being to become disciplined. When we add childlike to the word we've whipped ourselves before we started or they did or whoever brought up this thing.

There's all this talk now about people quitting football. I don't think anybody in football thinks that football is a game for everybody. Ever since there's been football people have been quitting.

The difference is now they've written a magazine article about it or gone on TV. They used to come home and explain that the coach didn't like them or something like that was the reason they failed in the sport. Now it's civil rights or psychology or sociology or something that caused them to fail in the sport. And Sauer ... this isn't anything new for Sauer. Sauer quit at Texas.

And there'll always be a lot of people quit football. But to me one of the greatest things about football is its discipline.

I don't believe that everything ought to be discipline. But I think that whenever a group of people is striving to reach a goal they have to have discipline. There isn't any way that a squad of 40 people can all think exactly alike. So they've got to have a constituted authority and they've got to go in the direction of that constituted authority. Now that doesn't mean they can't change that constituted authority, but there has to be a constituted authority. And I think, really in American life today, we don't have an over-abundance of discipline, we have an under-abundance of it. We need more of it.

Devine: My experiences in football have been extremely humanizing. It's difficult for me to picture what these people are talking about because there are thousands and thousands of kids in Missouri who would literally give their right arm to play for the University of Missouri. And I can't tell you the number of free agents and former players who have written me just for a tryout with Green Bay. I'm not going to mention any names, but they're big names.

A heck of a lot of kids want to make that high school team and that professional team. Gosh, to me—my experiences so far have been connected with extremely religious boys. There's men on the Green Bay team, Carroll Dale and Bart Starr, just to name a couple, who are probably some of the greatest Christians alive. Here's a group of guys completed devoted to a cause with virtually no regard for race, color, creed, economic stature. Where else in the United States is there a more humanizing thing? Certainly New York City with its slums couldn't be set up as such a humanizing thing.

Rathet: Do you treat things differently now than in the past because of the knowledge that the word 'de-humanizing' is being bandied about?

Devine: I'm a little more aware of the change in people—a little bit of change in society. I'm more careful with the words that I'm using, but only because I never really used any of them in any derogatory sense but have found some taken that way.

I grew up in a little town where there was a heck of a lot of prejudice. It was only a little town of about 2,000 people and it was the popular thing—we didn't have any black people—to be prejudiced against somebody other than your own religion.

ONE STORY CONTEMPORARY: This interesting home is designed around a 14 x 23 outdoor lounge area with sliding glass doors leading from four of the six rooms. The roof above the living room, front porch and two-car garage is flat. A service porch leads to the breakfast nook and basement. This two-bathroom house requires 1,798 square feet, excluding garage and porch. Other features are a lavatory, foyer skydomes, living room fireplace and plenty of closets. Plan HA680M was designed by architect Rudolph A. Matern, Master Plan Service, 89 East Jericho Tpke., Mineola, N.Y., 11501.

SAILING SCENE is the harbor at Karachi, Pakistan's major seaport, where renting boats is a big tourist-season business. The rental includes young balancers to lend their weight in a stiff wind.

Doomed Queen of the Adriatic

One of the glories of Western civilization, the slowly sinking island city of Venice faces a fate possibly even worse than the watery death predicted within a century. Even earlier its splendors may succumb to pollution, natural and manmade. The pigeons which turn the Piazza of St. Mark into a sea of movement, right, to the enchantment of tourists are also a hazard. Their droppings are a major factor in stone deterioration, as is smoke from the industrial mainland. Noble palaces on close examination often show cracked, peeling facades, below. Decay is further hastened by constant lapping of canal waters churned by proliferating motorboats, bottom left. Corroded statue, bottom right, symbolizes crumbling Venice's plight.

Hollywood Big Wheels Blow Gaskets

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Status symbols come and go, but in Hollywood the car is still the measure of who you are. But today it isn't the big, flashy, block-long limousine that spells "importance," it's the souped-up sports car.

"The Cadillac and the Lincoln and the Chrysler Imperial," says Vilem Haan, "are the transportation cars today. The stars use them just to get around. When they want to have fun or impress somebody, they use their sports cars."

Haan heads a company which has made a big thing out of sports car accessories. They sell by mail and through distributors all over the country, but here in Hollywood Haan has a retail store. It's a better place to see celebrities than the Brown Derby.

Nick Ashford and Valerie Simpson

You'll see Ferrari owners, such as Jim Garner, James Coburn, Steve McQueen; Jaguar drivers Lloyd Nolan and Mel Torme; Porsche people Dick Crenna, Stu Gilliam, Bob Mitchum, Roy Thinnes and Michael Dunn—and too many Mercedes-Benz folks to mention.

And there are some, like Dick Smothers, who don't know when to stop—Dickie drives a Mercedes, a Porsche and a Jaguar, presumably one at a time.

They all come in to buy new gadgets. Haan calls his place "a grownup's candy shop," and that sums it up neatly. Like Stu Gilliam, who bought five sets of musical Maserati air horns — they play "Colonel Bogey," "Never On Sunday," "La Cucaracha," "Lili Marlene" and "O Sole Mio." Everybody needs them.

Arte Johnson got a new car and his first step was Haan's, so he could get a leather wheel cover. Garner dropped by for five pairs of racing goggles. Whenever Japan's Toshire Mifune is in California, he stops in for a few necessities, such as new car badges. Ditto Cantinflas, from Mexico. Alex Dreier treated himself to a push-button lighted compass. Buddy Hackett ordered four racing suits, with matching helmets and gloves. Steve McQueen outfitted himself for his role in "Le Mans" at Haan's.

SCOTCH SPY FAMILY, OR CLANDESTINE

A couple of thoughts about music today, from Valerie Simpson and Nickolas Ashford. They're big with Motown — he writes and she writes. She's also started singing and they've combined on a smash new album, "Exposed."

Valerie started out to be a classical pianist, and she says you'd be surprised how many pop artists today have solid musical backgrounds. But it's all hush-hush, clandestine, she says.

"They won't admit it," she says. "They try to hide the fact that they have musical training. There's more pride, today, in being someone who made it without studying music."

But she is proud of her pianistic history, and you can tell, in her music, that she isn't just noodling around—she knows what she's doing.

Val and Nick share another musical background—gospel. They say it's bigger than ever.

"Lots of pop hits today," Nick says, "are real gospel—the Jesus influence."

The two met in a New York church and have been making beautiful music together since. "Exposed" is her first album as a performer, but it won't be her last. Nick will probably join her on another one, and maybe do one of his own, too.

Nick and Val are the team who wrote "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" for Diana Ross and they've also written for Ray Charles, Aretha Franklin, the Fifth Dimension and Marvin Gaye.

Four Area Students Briefed on Careers

ROLLA--They are learning how it would be to be an engineer or a scientist, or what a career in the liberal arts would offer. And through it all, they are learning what they can do with their chosen profession to help mankind.

About 65 high school students at a time are taking part in each of three one-week sessions on careers at the University of Missouri. Four area youths, Joseph Dodd, Caruthersivlle, Paula Medler and Laura Webb, Dexter, and Mary Beth Todt, Sikeston, completed such a session.

While on campus, the students live in university dormitories and attend sessions in engineering, science and liberal arts.

They talk with UMR faculty and students and tour the campus facilities. The emphasis is on their choice of a college study program and the career that follows it. The emphasis is also on how they, through their careers, can help mankind.

Each week, one full day and parts of others are devoted to the environmental challenge. On Mondays, students hear lectures by UMR professors on such environmenttal issues as these--what about pollution from internal combustion engines and power plants, how clean is nuclear energy, does nature pollute itself and what possibilities there are for recycling solid wastes. And, students are challenged by the faculty to solve pollution problems in the future.

To dramatize the pollution issue and ways to solve it, students are taken on tours of the UMR Nuclear Reactor, the mechanical engineering energy conversion laboratories, the Rolla waste treatment plant, and the sanitary landfill. At the treatment plant, they see how sewage is treated in various stages. They collect samples of water and soil for later analysis in the laboratory. And, at the sanitary landfill, they see how garbage and trash are buried in the earth, forming the site of a futre recreational area.

Students on that day, see a demonstration how to make waste products useful. They hear about metal recycling and about waste glass that is formed into building blocks and that is mixed with asphalt for paving--both research projects going on at UMR.

"It's a broad look at the environmental challenge which we get in a day," one student said. "But a look at that sanitary landfill makes me feel differently toward garbage."

Environmental challenges are worked in during the rest of the week, when students take part in such activities as a tour of the Rolla Regional Diagnostic Center, the Missouri Geological Survey and Water Resources and the UMR experimental mine.

According to Dr. Jack H. Emanuel, associate professor of civil engineering and director of the program, the careers institute is held each summer at UMR to help high school students decide on their future. Nearly all of UMR's summer faculty is involved in the careers institute. Especially active in the environmental aspect this time were Professor Robert Wolf, chairman of the department of metallurgical and nuclear engineering; Dr. Nord Gale, assistant professor of life sciences; Dr. D. Ray Edwards, director of the Nuclear Reactor; and Professor Chuck Remington of the mechanical and aerospace engineering department.

Pitfalls in Buying Rented Second Home

ST. LOUIS -- A vacation home that is rented out when not being used by its owners can offer a have-your-cake-and-eat-it-too investment opportunity, but it can also be a pitfall for the unwary, according to James B. Porter, president of the Missouri Society of Certified Public Accountants.

More than 1½ million families have second homes, many of which were paid for by rental income, Porter says, and according to the Commerce Department the median value of these homes away from home is $7,800.

Porter warns that such investments can decline in value because of poor construction, overdevelopment of the neighborhood or the high cost of insurance against fire, flood, vandalism and other hazards to which remote houses are subject.

Another danger is that the area may become so built up that wells and septic tanks no longer will do and expensive municipal water and sewer systems have to be installed, with no commensurate increase in the value of the house.

Porter advises would-be investors in second homes to investigate carefully the zoning and building codes, if any, before buying, especially in sparsely settled areas where the character of the neighborhood has not yet been established.

But when the dangers he cites are skirted, Porter said he believes the vacation home that helps defray its own costs can be a good investment.

"In addition to letting renters pay off the mortgage," he says, "repairs, maintenance and services can be taken as income tax deductions to the extent that the place is rented; the family can enjoy low - cost vacations; and real-estate ownership can be a hedge against inflation."

Car Manufacturer Not Liable

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

The only two things that Alvin kept spick -and -span were his bowling ball and his four - year -old car. Throwing the former into the latter, one evening, he went out for some recreation and ended up with a wreck -reation.

His brakes failed to hold and he crashed into a preceeding automobile. Pulling himself out of the pretzel -bent vehicle, Alvin discovered that the reason his brakes had copped out was because the brake fluid had leaked out.

Taking a dim view of the cause of the accident, Alvin sued the manufacturer of his car for the injuries that both he and his car suffered.

"Faulty brakes," he complained in court, "is as dangerous as a moth-eaten parachute. Not to install a device to forewarn a driver that he's losing brake - fluid is pure negligence on the part of an automobile manufacturer."

"Nonsense!" responded the manufacturer. "You can't make a car that's going to remain perfect indefinitely. While you can innoculate a person against measles, you can't innoculate a car against defects. Sooner or later, something's going to go wrong and that includes losing brake fluid."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the car manufacturer liable for Alvin's accident?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a manufacturer has no duty to furnish a machine that will never wear out or that will never require replacement of worn parts. His duty, noted the judge, is merely to make it free of latent defects and concealed dangers and hazards.

Arson Suspected In Lounge Fire

HAYTI -- Arsonists were successful Wednesday in their second attempt in less than two years to burn the Idle Hour Lounge on the outskirts of Hayti.

The mixed drink establishment has been closed for well over a year, after its license was revoked by the state liquor control department for violations. The building was owned by Kenneth Lawrence.

Hayti Fire Department was called to the scene at 3:59 a.m. after an unidentified person called the Pemiscot County Sheriff's office to report blazes in the building.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said arson was suspected. The building's interior was gutted, a spokesman noted.

Firemen were greeted with an overpowering smell of fuel oil, a spokesman said. Earlier, the building had been the target of an arson attempt however little damage was done at that time. Paint thinner was believed to have been the flamable substance used during the last attempt, a spokesman said.

The lounge is situated on the outskirts of Hayti on Hayti 84 east of the city.

Investigation by the sheriff's department and the Missouri Highway Patrol was underway.

The Prayer
from The Upper Room

Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee. (John 17:20-21, ASV)

PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, we thank You for Your Son Jesus who saved us through the sacrifice of Himself. We pray that we may be one, as You and He are one. In His name. Amen.

Visiting Kiwanians included Quill Reed, Clarence Suedekum, Canton Lorberg, Cecil Blaylock and Warren Hastings, all of Cape Girardeau, Dale Bracey, past governor of the Missouri - Arkansas district and John White both of Caruthersville, Kiwanis Divison Lt. Gov. Leonard Hand of Portageville and Owen Taul of Lilbourn.

Hastings is running for Lieutenant Governor of the division 15 of the Missouri-Arkansas district of Kiwanis International.

Lea and George Kirk, secretary, have returned home from the convention of Kiwanis International at San Francisco.

Kirk said he enjoyed the music as much as anything. Many clubs sent chorus', quartets and bands to the convention. The Kiwanis club of Poplar Bluff sent a quartet.

"Lafayette, we are here," was coined by Col. Charles Stanton of the American Expeditionary Force in France during World War I. The World Almanac notes Stanton used the phrase at the tomb of Lafayette.

Sod House Fair Attraction

SEDALIA -- One of the oldest, newest attractions at the Missouri State Fair Aug. 21-29 will be a replica of an authentic, pioneer sod house. On the west side of the Sedalia fairgrounds, the house will offer fairgoers a look at the way their Missourian forefathers lived on the windy plains when land was cheap and life was rugged.

The walls of the 30' X 20' X 8' structure are made of "bricks" constructed with one-half acre of sod laid like building brick and filled in with fine clay. Native white and black oak make up the roofing. Though not exactly waterproof, the house provides its own insulation -- warm in the winter and cool in the summer.

The house will be furnished with authentic pioneer - style furnishings including a wood cook stove believed to have been bought in 1880. Also among the furnishings will be a wash stand complete with a wash pan, water bucket and dipper, an iron bedstead, and a baby cradle.

Visitors to this free attraction will have an opportunity to see locally-grown sorghum being made into sorghum molasses on the sod house's front lawn. An oxen team of 3-year-old Holsteins hitched to a covered wagon will graze in the backyard.

Fairgoers can see the sod house and many other sesquicentennial attractions.

New Industry Provides 50 Jobs

CAIRO– A new industry bringing 50 jobs and almost a half a million dollars in capital investment to the two-county area was announced today through the office of Richard B. Ogilvie.

Lending agency for the Cache River Lumber Incorporated will be the Pulaski-Alexander Development Corporation which will purchase the Tamms Industries building and install the equipment to cut hardwood lumber.

PADCO will receive the $268,870 loan recently approved by the Small Business Administration, a $76,820 loan from Security Bank and Trust Company of Cairo and will contribute its own loan of $38,410 obtained through the Illinois Industrial Development Authority for the financing.

The building and the equipment will then be presented to Cache River Lumber and its president Mel Elizer and Treasurer Milton Chaudoin on a lease-purchase agreement which extends over 15 years.

The lumber company is presently located near Vienna which will soon be part of a highway improvement project.

Present employment at the Vienna location is about 20 people with 30 more expected to be hired when the plant assumes full operation in Tamms.

"We will install an entirely new production line with the most modern technical application of equipment lending itself to one of the most efficient hardwood lumber facilities in the Midwest," Elizer said.

"We plan to utilize local resources in lumber in keeping with modern conservation practices, thus adding further to the income of area residents," he added.

The plant will occupy 36,000 square feet of space and 24 acres of ground.

In making the announcement, Gov. Ogilvie stressed the cooperation between federal, state and local agencies which made the move possible.

Primarily involved were the office of U.S. Rep. Ken Gray, who made the initial announcement of the SBA loan, the Illinois Department of Business and Economic Development and the city of Tamms, as well as PADCO.

Nolan Jones, executive director of PADCO, singled out Tamms officials for his praise.

"We could not have completed this project without the wholehearted cooperation we received from Tamms," he said.

"This project is the culmination of months of work by many agencies, including the offices of Sen. Charles Percy and Sen. Adlai Stevenson.

"The effect of $500,000 initial capital investment and the continuing contribution of thriving industry makes will be felt by all residents of the two county area PADCO serves," he said.

Dexter Water Needs Called Urgent

DEXTER – The need for more water, and more water pressure in order to provide adequate fire protection in Dexter is "urgent", First Chief Al Banken told the Dexter Kiwanis Club this week at its weekly luncheon meeting.

Banken, a veteran fireman and the man in charge of fire safety measures for the city, said that there are "many cases" in the city where there is an inadequate supply of water should there be a major fire.

He cited in particular the north side of Dexter, beginning north of the railroad tracks and extending northward. In this area, he said, there is an insufficient flow from the water hydrants, and pressure is very low.

He cited the instance several months ago when water from a fire hydrant was used to wash mud off a street near the new federal housing development. The water pressure suddenly became so low that a nearby plant was "out of water" in "just a few minutes."

"If we had a real house fire in that area, accompanied by a wind we could have a real tragedy and lose several houses," the fire chief declared.

In another part of the city, he said a fireman could "step on a two inch water line and stop the flow of water," so low is the pressure.

Banken, estimated, in reponse to a question that "about 30 per cent of Dexter" does not have adequate fire protection due to an inadequate water supply or low pressure. He cited mainly the north part of Dexter, extending from the northeast to the northwest.

"And every day we see new homes being built and new businesses, all of which means more water, and the need for more fire protection," the chief added.

He said there was numerous hydrants throughout the city, where the fire department can "pump them dry" in a matter of a few minutes. "Or the pressure is so low that it is not providing enough protection in case of fire," he added.

Banken also talked of the needs of the fire department -- but quickly added that "our greatest tool is water, and our greatest need is water."

He said that he and members of the department, working with the Missouri Inspection Bureau, are developing plans for a new fire station in Dexter. It will be located north of the railroad tracks but the exact location has not been determined.

And sometime, in the near future, Dexter must give thought to a new fire truck and some new equipment, the fire chief indicated. He said that such plans are being developed and will be presented to the City Council in the near future.

Banken praised the Dexter volunteer force of 16 firemen, but said the day was approaching when city officials must consider the appointment of one or more fulltime firemen, or drivers. But this, too, will be considered by the City Council at a later date.

Telephone Strike Possible

Mark Rudloff, manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, said today there is a possibility of a telephone strike.

Rudloff explained that the contract of Western Electric Company, who are working in most of the Southwestern Bell buildings, will terminate Wednesday. The contract is with the communication Workers of America, district six.

"If an agreement is not reached by Western Electric on their contract, they could picket those buildings they are working in, which in effect, "would be a strike," Rudloff commented.

He said the contract is open-ended, which means negotiations could continue after Wednesday without a strike.

He said that the contract of Southwestern Bell with the CWA will terminate July 17.

The Western Electric and Southwestern Bell contracts are separate.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Senate To Question Value Of Sleep, Pep And Worry Pills; Huge Oil Pools May Lie Off Vietnam; It Didn't Sway LBJ; Ex-Officer Offers Vets Jobs, Peddles Names To Companies.

THE SILVER STAR AND PURPLE HEART were presented posthumously to the Leslie Karnes family by Capt. Samuel Lamey, Sgt. Major Marvin Sealander, and M/Sgt. Richard Sullivan, all of the fifth army advisory group in Cape Girardeau. Accepting the medals were Mrs. Karnes, Sue Ann, 6, Michael and Mark, both 12.

'He Would Die Doing This Fighting'

By JUDY GAZETTE

On Feb. 16 at approximately 10 a.m., Army Sgt. 1/C Leslie Leroy Karnes was driving an amphibious vehicle through the swamp land of Vietnam, near Can Gao canal, 25 miles south of Rach Gia.

He was part of a five man "high brass" patrol involved in a forward reconnaissance through saturated Viet Cong territory.

The patrol was ambushed and every man was wounded -- Karnes and a lieutenant colonel were killed by enemy fire.

The Can Gao canal represents little more than a spot on a newspaper map and the lieutenant colonel's name would not strike any familiar notes in this community.

Sergeant Karnes, 33, born and reared in Sikeston, left this town a daily reminder of his tragic death -- a Korean widow and three children. They are survivors -- next of kin.

His widow's name is Soon Lim -- "Sooni" she likes to be called. The children are Michael Leslie and Mark Lynn, twin boys, 12, and Sue Ann, 6.

After talking with Soonie, I think that her childhood and that of Karnes are of interest because of the sharp contrast in their early lives.

He was born Jan. 21, 1938, in Neelyville, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Karnes. He graduated from schools in Sikeston, enlisted in the national guard when he was 14, and entered the regular army when he was 17. He was sheltered from the immediate and personal horrors of enemy invasion and war.

Sooni was born in Kim Chen, Korea in 1935, into certain poverty and surrounded by death. When she was three, her family was moved to Japan, and back to Korea in 1945. She went to school only when the war permitted, and that was not often or for long.

Karnes has one brother and two sisters. Sooni has three sisters and two brothers surviving -- at least eight of her brothers and sisters died in the wars. Her father had two families, not unusual in her country. Karnes was a protestant, she was reared in the faith of Buddha.

They met in Seoul, Korea, in 1956, where she was working in an installation PX. They were married Sept. 19, 1957, in Seoul. They remained in Korea for another year before being transferred to St. Louis. There the twins were born March 14, 1959.

In the military scheme of things, the family was soon sent to Germany, where they lived three years.

Sooni interrupted the stream of facts.

"That is why my English is not so good," she smiled, "I learned to speak it in Germany....I have a German accent."

From Germany they went to Ft. Polk, La., in 1963, where little Sue Ann was born. They lived there for five years -- by army standards, a long time. While there, Karnes attended schools, was a drill instructor in hand to hand combat, jungle operations and judo. He was a career soldier.

His first duty in Vietnam was in 1968. He was a Sgt. first class then, and returned from combat with recognition as an outstanding soldier.

He had been awarded the bronze star medal, good conduct medal with three bronze loops, national defense service medal with first oak leaf cluster and the Vietnam service medal.

At that time, Sooni and the children moved to Sikeston to be near his family and secure the children until his return. That time he came back.

After seven months at Ft. Polk, once again, Karnes volunteered for duty in Vietnam. This time making Sooni fully aware that he might not return.

"He told me too many times," she said softly, "that he knew he would die doing this fighting. So I knew that he would, someday."

And now the stage has been set for Sgt. 1/c Leslie Leroy Karnes' death by briefly touching on his life.

Feb. 16, 1971, came on Tuesday. Karnes' return home already had been approved. He had held his plane tickets two weeks. He would be in Sikeston in time to celebrate the twin's birthday. In 18 months he planned to retire from the army and buy resort land, rent boats to fishermen, and do a bit of fishing himself.

This time, his body came home, 10 days after his death, accompanied by a close friend, a silver star and the purple heart for gallantry in action. A memorial service was held with military rites. Flowers came from all over the country. The children received scholarships for college. Sooni was informed of the financial and legal assistance available for army widows, and reminded of her continuing commissary privileges. She was urged to keep her identification up to date.

"What was your reaction," I asked, "after the shock of his death?"

She didn't understand my question, for she found it difficult to separate one emotion from another.

"Just crying," she answered, holding out her hands, "then I know soon that I have to take care of everything.... the children."

Sooni's misunderstanding of routine questions prevented her from answering quickly, but she finally related her ideas and decisions about the family's future.

"You know," she said, "you've grown up here (United States) and have had a good life, but you don't appreciate your own country. My husband gave his life for a freedom....he died for something he thought was right. I'm proud of him. I want to stay here and be the good mother to my children."

Last weekend Sooni took the children on a camping trip. She learned to love water sports from her husband and, as she says, "can't give up fishing." The boys are better than average baseball players and she never misses a game. She describes them as average students, but good athletes.

In March, she and the boys were baptized. They are members of Murray Lane Baptist church.

"I couldn't have made it without the people there," she continued. "I have to trust in the Lord. That's important."

She plans to buy another home in Sikeston, but wants to make the decisions slowly, accurately.

Questions -- the routine ones -- were not so easily asked, for the drama and emotion of a dead husband and father doesn't vanish in five months. It touched me with a quiet hand every time she answered.

"What do you want to remember most about him," I asked.

"When I was sick," she replied, "and if I got mad, he always took the children somewhere."

Sooni is aware that there will forever be someone in her situation, that someone must do the fighting. She does not question her husband's death. The years ahead will not be easy, but she is a determined young woman — busy with the task of bouncing back.

"We had 15 years together," she concluded, "and he left me three pretty children and memories. I will see him again, I know that. Fifteen beautiful years....and they were all mine. They were very good."

Petitions Started

Seek Road Bond Vote

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Highway Commission announced today it has decided to start an initiative petition campaign next month for a $475 million road bond issue.

Jack Stapleton Sr. of Stanberry, commission chairman, said "the only thing we're asking is that the people have a right to vote on the road bonds."

If the petition campaign is successful in getting 90,000-plus signatures, the proposal could go before voters at a special election or at the 1972 general election.

Stapleton said the commission made the decision Thursday night and said that was the first chance it had to discuss the proposal which had been recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

He said the money would be used to finance the commission's original 12-year intercityinterregional highway plan, including 2,000 miles of improved roads and 12 major bridges. Much of the money would be spent to upgrade existing highways to dual lanes.

Stapleton said the bond issue plan would not include any money for urban mass transit systems, as proposed earlier by the governor.

The 1971 legislature knocked down the governor's recommendation for a highway bond issue because of Senate objections to the high interest costs.

Instead it passed a 2-cent increase in the gasoline tax but the governor vetoed it on the grounds that would not provide enough money for a stepped up construction program and was not tied to a bond issue.

If the voters approve the bond issue, Stapleton said he hoped the legislature would find ways to finance it.

The governor's earlier bond proposal would have been financed by increasing the gas tax from 5 to 7 cents and boosting other highway user fees by enough to equal the revenue of another one cent gas tax.

The 1971 defeat of the governor's road bond proposal was his third loss on a highway improvement program. Twice before he proposed a toll road bond issue but the courts rejected the first one and the voters turned down the second one.

Sen. William B. Waters, DLiberty, whose gas tax increase bill was vetoed this year, has said he would re-introduce such a measure in the 1972 session.

In the past, road bond or gas tax increase proposals have required a statewide citizens' committee to gain voter support, including all segments of the highway industry and automobile users.

Plans for such a campaign organization have not yet been worked out.

Dismissed Election Cases

Jury Scrutiny is Possible

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal grand jury may be asked to look into election fraud cases dismissed by Prosecuting Atty. Arthur Stephenson of Pemiscot County, U.S. Atty. Daniel Bartlett Jr. said Thursday.

Stephenson said he dismissed the remaining 10 of 19 indictments issued last fall because he did not feel he could obtain convictions.

The indictments of election judges and clerks stemmed from irregularities in the August 1970 Democratic primary in the bootheel county.

Six of the 19 pleaded guilty and were given fines and suspended sentences. Stephenson dismissed two other indictments earlier this year.

The prosecutor said he decided to dismiss the remaining indictments after Helen Van Cleve pleaded innocent and was acquitted by a jury after just five minutes of deliberation.

"In my opinion, I tried the strongest and best case I had and further prosecution of the remaining defendants would amount to unwarranted expense to the county when weighed with the possibility of conviction," the prosecutor said.

Bartlett said he was surprised by "the wholesale dismissals."

He said his office received a letter urging federal action from Judge D. J. Merideth Jr., of Pemiscot County last month. Bartlett said the judge expressed the fear that local officials would not follow through on the election fraud cases.

Bartlett said he would discuss the matter with superiors in Washington.

East Prairie Taxes Increased 30 Cents

By SHIRLEY PRITCHETT

EAST PRAIRIE--An ordinance increasing the tax rate on all taxable property in the city from $1.35 to $1.65 per one hundred dollar assessed valuation was adopted last night by the city council.

The 30-cent increase will be used to maintain a sinking fund for payment of the principal and interest on water and sewer system improvement bond.

A proposed operating budget for the 1971-72 fiscal year of $223,090, submitted by City Manager Jim Wilson was approved. Operating expenses for last year totaled $213,088.

Wilson presented a detailed budget form, with a breakdown of operating receipts and estimated expenditures. The form was approved.

Wilson informed the council that Will Carson, operator of the city dump, agreed to sign a one-year contract beginning Jan. 1, 1972, for $100 per month, an increase of $25.

Payment of expenditures totaling $2,206.80 for June was approved. The collector's report showed a total of $10,589.63 collected during June.

The police judge's report showed a total of $820 in assessed fines, with $760 collected. The difference was worked out in city street maintenance.

Councilmen Jones Hedge and Edward Falkoff were authorized to meet with representatives from the McMikle and Shelby Funeral Homes for opinions on developments of the city-owned WOW cemetery. A proposal submitted by Henry Bussey of Sikeston for improvements was tabled.

The council instructed City Attorney Fielding Potashnick to draw up a stop-gap zoning ordinance restricting the opening of commercial businesses outside the fire zone without council approval. An ordinance setting weight limits on city streets will be drawn up by Potashnick for council approval.

A $300 donation to the Little League program and a full page ad in the Mississippi county sesquicentennial official sovenir book for $75 was approved.

Vella Dunn, 46, of Sikeston, a passenger in the Dodge, sustained a serious injury. The driver of the Plymouth and a passenger, Don Harris, of Mounds Ridge, Kan., sustained serious injuries. They were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

On highway 80, one mile west of East Prairie, at 9:45 a.m., a 1966 Chevrolet going west, driven by Randal Canada, 25, of East Prairie, started to pass a car making a turn, swerved to miss the car, ran off the road, and overturned, the patrol said.

Canada sustained a back injury and was taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Federal Court Asked About Orton Ouster

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo. (AP)— A petition on its way to the U.S. Supreme Court today asks the high court to review and reverse a Missouri Supreme Court order ousting Clyde Orton as sheriff of Pemiscot County. Orton's attorney, James E. Reeves, mailed the petition Thursday. The State Supreme Court ousted Orton in April. He was accused of permitting widespread violations of state liquor and gambling laws in his southeast Missouri county.

The petition contends Orton was denied due process on four grounds.

He claimed he was found guilty of charges not made in the original ouster suit filed by Missouri Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth.

Orton said he was denied a jury trial.

The finding of the state Supreme Court was made without evidence of guilt, Orton said.

And, the petition said, the Missouri Supreme Court did not hear Orton's case, turning the hearing over to a special commissioner. Orton said he was allowed only 50 minutes for his arguments.

Thad Shelly, a Hayti farmer, was chosen in a special election to complete Orton's term as sheriff.

CAN WE DECIDE WHAT LAWS TO OBEY?

Federal laws that permit the Government to classify some documents as secret are laws like all others. It is not permissable for citizens or companies to pick and choose what law they will obey.

We can think of a number of classified documents we would like to read and publish, not the least being those concerning the assassination of President Kennedy. Many others could produce sensational newspaper editions. It might even be argued that this is in the best interests of the American public, and incidentally of the newspaper that scores the biggest scoops by violations of the law.

It is not by accident that the secret documents made public recently concern the origins of the Vietnam war, rather than the assassination of a President; or Soviet infiltration of the United Nations; or Operations Keelhaul, by which some hundreds of thousands of Russians who wanted to be on our side were forced to return to the Soviet Union after World War II.

It is interesting that the recent publication of documents without authorization represents one more effort to make the United States get out of Vietnam in a rout.

TURNING THE GRINDSTONE

You do not see them very often in this age of power driven machinery, but half a century ago an old grindstone sat behind the woodshed. A 12-year-older did not anticipate the job. It was hard, monotonous work to turn the crank while father bore down hard to take a nick from the scythe.

Scythes had to be kept razor sharp for efficient work and the cutter bar on the mowing machine had many small tringular blades that needed sharpening. Sometimes as a lad sat on an old box and turned, he wondered which was worse - turning the grindstone or cranking the old cedar churn when the cream was obstinate and would not change to butter.

The New England Farmer, July 1860, put it succinctly. "Who will venture to compute the number of sea voyages that have been planned by farmers' sons at the crank of some old grindstone, or of resolutions made to be merchant, mechanic, anything so long as they shall not be obliged to grind dull axes on a miserable grindstone."

A lad knew, of course, that tools had to be sharp to do good work. He had been told that fact many times. But that didn't lessen his feelings as his arm went round and round with the crank. He knew that scythes received nicks and that mower blades dug into humocks and were dulled. The work had to be done and he had to turn the grindstone.

But when Uncle Ben smiled as he watched and said, "Good for you, my boy. It builds character," a boy thought that he could build his character in other and less monotonous ways.

COUNTER-PRODUCTIVE

We've been observing the small but enthusiastic support and interest in a four-day workweek and its resulting three-day weekend in some industries and business.

But before we start riding off in this direction as the cure-all for unemployment and other problems, we find ourselves faced with numerous and notable exceptions.

Very likely, physicians (especially your own family doctor) would be an exception when your family needs him. Then, let's consider the hospitals with their nurses and technicians and the fact that they must look after the ill and afflicted around the clock every day and night of the year. Your pharmacist is on call around the clock to provide prescriptions and medication at any time you need it.

It is time that we ask just how in the heck can we reduce our law enforcement and fire departments to the new utopia of working on a four-day week? Why should the employes of the water company, the Kansas Power & Light and Southwestern Bell have to man their services day and night throughout the workweek? Perhaps you wouldn't miss your daily newspaper, radio and television programs if reduced to just four-days of service a week. Many retailers such as the food suppliers, gas stations, auto repair shops and discount stores are now operating on a six-day and seven-day workweek. Why? Because the shopping public likes it and if you are going to stay in business, you had better meet the public demand.

When you need a plumber or electrician, you'll even pay his overtime rates if the emergency is on the weekends. Any farmer will tell you that there is no such thing as a four-day workweek in planting and harvesting crops or handling livestock.

The list of those whose services and products just don't fit their customers' needs on a four-day basis just grows and grows. And we can assure you that we haven't forgotten the men and women in our armed forces who must defend our country from any enemy and are on call and duty constantly. Even mothers would welcome a four-day workweek, we are sure, but please tell them how?

But since the Federal government owes nearly $400 billion, with out mentioning the billions owed by state and local government, it seems to us that the people of the United States had better be thinking about working more instead of less so we can pay it off. That is possible if we elect public officials who can and will reduce spending beyond our incomes ... and maybe even reduce taxes, when the budgets are realistic again. The founders of America didn't make this country great by shortening the work-week; instead inventive minds and strong workers labored long hours to bring some prosperity and stability to our nation and its people.

FORGETFUL CRITICS

Until only recently, the more progressive a company or industry was in expanding its services the more it was applauded as a community builder and taxpayer. Suddenly a school of thought has developed which seeks to curb industrial growth as a means of protecting the environment. A leading critic of the electric industry now claims that, "Electric utilities created a power shortage by overselling their product through advertising."

The critic failed to mention the long delays of various regulatory agencies in granting approval for construction of needed new generating facilities, nor did he mention the one inescapable problem that overrides all others--population growth. And, he failed to reconcile his charge of "overselling" by the utilities with the insistent pressure for rehabilitation of inner cities and the bringing of higher living standards to depressed areas everywhere. Energy, of course, is a key factor in higher living standards. How else is an electric company to extend its services to those who need it if it does not build new plants and encourage the use of electricity through advertising?

It is not necessary to look far to find why there can be no relaxation in the continuing plans of power companies to expand their facilities. A major investor-owned electric company* that serves Long Island, New York, has released some figures on population growth in its area that show what an electric utility is up against. The total population of this company's service area is greater than the individual population of 24 states and is more than one percent of the total U. S. population. As of January 1, 1970, it served an estimated population of 2,645,726. Since 1960, portions of its service area have registered population growths in excess of 60 percent. Apparently, some critics of the electric industry have forgotten that the first duty of a public utility is to provide service wherever and whenever needed.

Less than 35 percent of the independent businessmen are opposed to employing an ex-convict or parolee to fill a job for which the person is capable of handling, after release from prison.

However, the type of crime for which a person was sent to prison is a factor in determination of the willingness to hire. A person who has served time for burglary is three times more desirable than one convicted of a sex crime.

This data is developing from a special survey being conducted in California by the National Federation of Independent Business in cooperation with state authorities.

California was selected by the Federation for this pilot survey because the state reportedly has the largest prison population of any state in the nation, has a high crime rate, and a cost of maintaining a prisoner that runs as high as $3,500 per year.

But although approximately two-thirds of the independent business proprietors questioned to date say they would not be adverse to hiring a released prisoner, per se, there is a wide diversity of opinion on the type of released offender that would be acceptable.

Of those who report they would hire an ex-convict, 57 percent say they would hire an ex-burglar, 53 percent say they would employ an ex-robber, and 36 percent report they would hire a former drug addict. But less than 20 percent say they would be willing to hire anyone that had been convicted of a sex offense.

The Federation survey is also revealing a reluctance in the past of the independent businessmen to participate in the type of prisoner-work program that has been espoused by many students of penology.

Only 42 percent currently say they would be willing to hire prisoners which are serving time, with the prisoners working at private employment during the days, returning to prison at night and on weekends.

On another section of the Federation survey the businessmen by a 2 to 1 margin express support for shortening the prison terms for offenders if the present available level of supervision and services for released offendors is increased.

AN ENVIRONMENTAL LIABILITY

A number of municipalities have passed ordinances making new overhead installations of power lines illegal. By the simple process of passing an ordinance, these communities apparently hope to achieve an environment more to their liking, and some city officials hope to gain favor with voters. The action of these communities is an excellent illustration of the wide gap between fiction and fact in matters relating to our environment.

An official of the investor-owned power company* charged with the responsibility of serving several communities under the prohibition of such ordinances explained to community representatives the facts of life about undergrounding power lines. In the area involved, this company had budgeted $51.5 million for the next five years for the installation of new lines. Said the official, "If all those lines were to be installed underground--just in this five-year period -- that cost would be $303.7 million. that is an increase of $252 million . . The revenue necessary to support this. . . would require a rate increase of at least 40 percent to our. . . customers!"

Such gigantic added burden in all fairness would have to be borne by the customers of the areas involved. Also, the official went on to point out, "We want to be a good citizen and we want to make as many installations underground as can be justified. At the same time we have neither the right nor the authority to make uneconomic or fiscally irresponsible investments. In addition, there are tremendous technological problems associated with. . .underground installation. . ." Laws that fail to take into account cost and technological capabilities are more of an environmental liability than an asset.

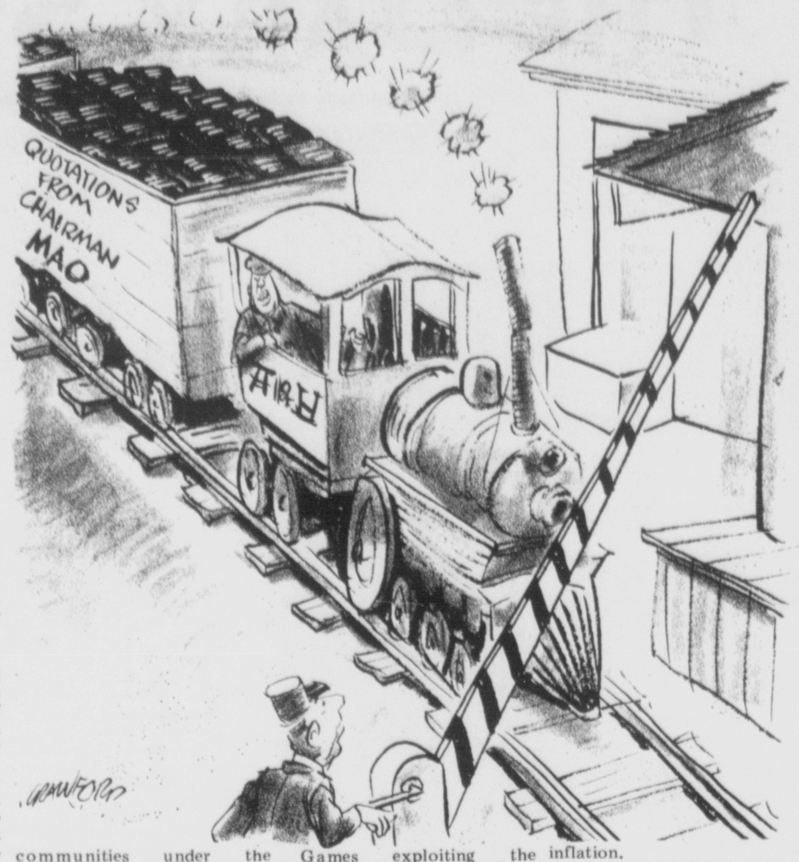
Such Is Fame, Spiro

One of the most prominent faces at the recent Toy Fair in New York, where more than 10,000 buyers from around the world did their Christmas shopping early, was that of Spiro T. Agnew, he of wrist watch and sweatshirt fame.

"It's the Trade Exchange from China!"



Games exploiting the immense appeal (?) of the vice president included Spiro T. Agnew board games, jigsaw puzzles, historical games and even a miniature drag racer.

The latter item, called the "Hard Hat Hauler" by its manufacturer, Model Products Corp., is billed as the "political machine of the future." The model kit has likenesses of Agnew and Ronald Reagan on the right wheels, while the images of Senators Muskie and Kennedy adorn the left wheels. A chrome hard-hat serves as the body and a giant lunch bucket is the gas tank.

Naturally, it turns both right and left, as a political machine should.

RECESSION MAY BE BETTER

Those who feel a little more inflation might help cure the recession might pause to consider what has happened in housing. Inflation and the consequent declining value of the dollar have pushed the price of a new home beyond the reach of a great many people. Inflated construction costs have brought home building to a virtual stop in some parts of the country, and "a little more inflation" would help bring it to a complete standstill.

Pursuit of the philosophy of a little inflation has reduced the value of the dollar by something like two thirds within the memory of many now living. The moral of this may be that we can live with a little recession a lot easier than we can live with a little inflation.

Auto Safety Devices Pay Off

In 1970, for the first time in 25 years, the nation's economic loss from highway accidents took a downturn.

The reduction was nearly $375 million from 1969, reports the Insurance Information Institute. The total economic loss, however, was still a staggering $16.2 billion in such categories at lost wages, medical expenses and property damage.

A drop in deaths and injuries, the first in a decade, was the key factor. Final traffic figures for 1970 show that although there were 91,000 more accidents than in 1969, the number of deaths (55,300) declined by 1,100, or 2 per cent, and injuries (nearly 5 million) were down by 26,872, or .5 per cent.

The good news is tempered by the fact that the death and accident toll recorded an increase in December 1970 as compared with December 1969, reversing the downtrend, at least temporarily.

But an overall decrease in deaths and injuries in 1970 in the face of an increasing number of accidents, indicates that while driving habits have not improved, improved automobile safety features are having an effect. These include collapsible steering wheels, ballooning windshields, the elimination of protruding knobs and handles inside cars and, of course, seat belts.

A TRUE FISH STORY

The seas have been a source for material and inspirational resources since before the dawn of history. Food, fun, transport of people and goods, and highways to adventure always have been of major importance to humanity's relationship with the sea. All these still retain their importance, if anything more so now than ever.

The Louisiana Gulf Coast in 1950 provided a catch of 400 million pounds of fish and shellfish, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service. For the next 10 years, exploration and drilling for oil, a newer usage, increased. Yet, by 1960, the Louisiana fish and shellfish catch had doubled to 800 million pounds. From hearing the almost-hysterical outbursts of faddists in certain academic and political circles, it would seem impossible for such large catches to continue if oil operations continued.

Since 1960, the Louisiana fish and shellfish catch has for the first time passed every other state in volume. The 1970 catch was 1.1 billion pounds, the first time any state reported more than one billion pounds.

Earnest study and good work for a quarter of a century made this modern miracle possible. Louisianans appreciate the tax revenues and wealth their oil resources have brought the state's people. They also appreciate their tasty seafood and the wealth it brings. They need them both, as do we all. They will see that the sea continues to provide both. HLH

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

WOMEN SAY NO:
Nixon's Labor Secretary Sees More Monday Holidays But Not Swing To Quixotic Four-Day Week

by Victor Riesel

Suddenly a few months ago there flared across the land a proposal for a four-day week -- made up of 10-hour days. It took hold in a handful of firms among the millions of American corporations.

It intrigued some labor leaders because they saw it as possibly intriguing young workers. And as a short cut to the 32-hour week -- four days at 8-hour shifts.

Though Secretary of Labor Jim Hodgson is self-effacing, albeit one of the most popular such Cabinet officers this nation has had, he was just the man to ask if the famed, well-publicized four-day (10-hour day) week has a chance to take hold or is it a fad. Mr. Hodgson here speaks for himself. I do believe he thinks it's a fad and that leisure time will come in blocs of new holidays. Here is his view written especially for this column:

by
James D. Hodgson
Secretary of Labor

Washington:-- Labor versus leisure is an old problem. How much time should we spend acquiring the good things of life? How much time should we spend enjoying them? How should we divide our time between working and resting?

For centuries we followed the divine example of working six days and resting on the seventh. The five day, 40 hour workweek is a creature of comparatively recent times. There is nothing sacred about it. Why not arrange it so that we could have three days a week off instead of two?

This is the proposal of proponents of the four-day, 40-hour week. It's an intriguing idea, already being tried out on an experimental basis by some 100 American companies. Enthusiasts are vocal. Experience is mixed.

Proponents include both employers and employees. For employers reputed advantages are increased productivity, improved morale, and assorted other benefits. For employees it means a 20 per cent reduction in commuter time to and from the job and leisure time in weekly blocks of three days instead of two.

It also means working a 10-hour day -- or a day approaching 10 hours.

Is it worth it? Many employees report that it is. A recent Gallup poll indicates that a high proportion of men like the idea, particularly younger men. On the other hand, this preference is not shared by women, who voted against it by a 2 to 1 margin.

One concludes that reactions are determined by life style. The sports buff or travel enthusiast may think the extra daily work hours a small price to pay for the luxury of three days of leisure. Not so the working mother who knows that the current eight-hour day leaves her little enough time to get the family off in the morning and the dinner on at night.

The returns are far from in, but we in the Labor Department are following developments with keen interest. We are getting many questions. We are being asked about State laws that prohibit women working for more than eight or nine hours a day. And we are being asked about the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act and the Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act, both of which require premium overtime after eight hours a day for covered employees. These laws establish eight hours as the standard workday on most federal government procurement contracts.

We want to respond to the wishes of employers and employees, but we also need to probe more deeply into many questions before recommending legislative changes to Congress. High among our concerns is whether the longer working day might have any effect upon the health and safety of the American worker. And we have other questions – the effect on moonlighting, for example, or what the new workweek structure would mean to such groups as part-time working mothers.

One of the most interesting questions arising from current enthusiasm for the four-day, 40-hour week is whether it signals an interest not only in restructuring available leisure time but also in adding to our total leisure. The American worker has traditionally divided his productivity gains between shorter worktime and higher real earnings, with emphasis on the latter. Since World War II, the tendency to opt for higher living standards rather than reduction of working hours has been somewhat more pronounced than in previous decades. Much of the movement for increased leisure that did occur duing this period came in the form of more holidays or longer vacations.

Are we now seeing a puch for more total leisure? With all the current complaints about the evils of striving for ever greater production and the search for a more satisfying life, it might be easy to come to this conclusion. But I do not think so. Maintaining high standards of living is still important to most American citizens. And accomplishing all the environmental, health, and social improvements as we see ahead will call for a great deal of work.

The reasonable conclusion is that we will see a continuation of recent historical trends, with only a gradual and modest extension of total leisure time. We will continue to take an overwhelming part of our productivity gains in higher living standards.

But it is also reasonable to conclude that any additional leisure we do achieve will come in block form, just as the four-day, 40-hour week proposal is a proposal for block leisure. This kind of leisure seems increasingly to be the sort that people want.

One way to achieve this is by the creation of additional Monday holidays. Today nearly all American industry operates on a four-day week for 10 per cent of the year now that five of our national holidays fall on Monday. It is easy to envision additional Monday holidays over a period of time, possibly to a point where each month would offer a three-day weekend.

Whether or not total workweek hours decline, it is a good bet that rearranging leisure time into blocks is the trend of the future. It may come from restructuring the present workweek, from additional weekend holidays, or even from longer vacations. It looks as though this is what today's working men -- and a lot of working women -- want.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON--Such popular brand-name drugs as Compoz, Excedrin PM, No-Doz, Nyquil, Nytol, Quiet World, Sleep-Eze, Sominex and Vivarin will come under Senate attack this month.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., will challenge the efficacy of these pills, potions and palliatives that are supposed to calm the nervous, cheer the depressed, rouse the drowsy, relieve the sleepless and make the dull sparkle.

His Senate Small Business subcommittee will hold hearings July 21, 22 and 23. Medical experts, psychiatrists and government specialists have been invited to tell what they know about "mood drugs."

Nelson's preliminary investigation indicates that some of the most ballyhooed "mood" medicines are really old remedies such as caffeine or new remedies wrongly used such as anti-histamines.

(Anti-histamines are put in some sleeping pills not to fight allergies, for which they are medically prescribed, but to cause drowsiness.)

Other pills are potent but bring only temporary results. Side effects not mentioned in the small print on the label have also been reported. There is less clinical data on over-the-counter drugs, Nelson has found, than on prescription drugs.

But Nelson is even more concerned over the "drug culture" that has grown up around today's tranquilizers and amphetamines. Children exposed to drug advertising grow up believing that an over-the-counter pill can change their moods and solve their problems.

The giant pharmaceutical firms have been invited to send spokesmen to Nelson's hearing. At this writing, they had not replied. They maintain, of course, that their drugs are safe and effective when taken according to directions.

--OIL AND VIETNAM--

We have tried to pin down rumors that the oil barons encouraged U.S. involvement in Vietnam to protect the offshore oil reserves for them to exploit.

It's no secret that Lyndon Johnson was close to Texas oil interests and that he ran interference for them in Congress. The Pentagon Papers also make clear that LBJ, as President, was preparing to intervene heavily in Vietnam before the August, 1964, Gulf of Tonkin incident.

Signs of oil off the Vietnam coast were discovered as early as 1955. But it wasn't until 1968, four years after the U.S. build-up in Vietnam, that Amper Corporation, an American consortium, began serious explorations in Vietnam waters. Amper conducted its explorations in behalf of Standard Oil of New Jersey and Indiana, Mobil Oil, Gulf Oil, Atlantic Richfield, Phillips Petroleum, Tenneco, Continental Union Oil of California, Dutch Shell and British Petroleum.

Amper estimated that the shores of Southeast Asia contained more oil reserves than the Middle East. The explorations have indicated a huge seabed oil reservoir at the mouth of the Mekong River.

We have talked to inside sources and examined confidential documents in our search for evidence that the oil boys may have been behind President Johnson's decision to send troops to Vietnam. As far as we can learn, the oil interests had nothing to do with LBJ's Vietnam decisions.

Indeed, the government has refused to grant the oil companies any financial guarantees to encourage drilling in Vietnamese waters. AID Administrator John Hannah, in secret meetings, has urged a guarantee to the oil companies but without success.

Mailing Lists--Military regulations strictly forbid the release of names and addresses for "commercial solicitation purposes." The Army Times has been offered as high as $10,000 for its subscription list, but all the service magazines keep their lists under lock and key. C. W. Van Orman, an enterprising retired Army officer, has gotten around the ban by advertising as a "military" employment agency, offering jobs for servicemen. Then he sells the names and addresses to insurance companies for $2.50 a name. Van Orman, reached at his Seaside, Calif., home, acknowledged his personnel placement ads used to bring in about 10,000 applicants per month. He found jobs for only seven or eight each month, compiled the rest into mailing lists. The recession has crimped his operation. He has reduced his advertising, he said, and receives only 3,000 to 4,000 applications a month. But this is plenty. Complained Van Orman: "I can't sell anywhere near the names I receive."

Under the Dome--Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., wears his bathrobe around the house but not for comfort alone. He keeps cookies in the pockets....Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has such a weakness for rhubarb that his staff gives him rhubarb pies in place of birthday cakes. He also drinks milk shakes for energy....Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., has a passion for frozen custard. A recent auto trip to West Virginia was routed so he would pass several Tastee Freeze or Dairy Queen stands on the way. He also drinks a lot of diet Pepsi....Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., won't touch carbonated drinks. He believes they're unhealthy, quenches his thirst instead with fruit juices.

NEW YORK (AP) — Everyone yearns for a perfect world, but this is a hopeless hope.

There is no perfect world this side of the pearly gates, and there never will be.

Then how about a better world? Ah, there is an achievable dream. There are millions of ways the world can be made better, and each man has his own formula for it.

Here are a few suggested steps that might help the human race and the planet earth to hum in harmony instead of screech in long discord:

Each husband could have two wives if he willed it—one to act as his housekeeper and second mother, the other to act as his girld friend.

Each wife could hav two husbands if she willed it—one to pay her bills, the other to give her thrills.

All teen-agers would be taken from parents at 13, kept and educated in vast government pens, and returned home at 21 with a coilege diploma and a job.

Cocktail parties would be banned except between the hours of 5 and 7:30 p.m. on Saturday nigi

Any member of a government body which imposed a new tax on the people would have to pay five times that amount himself.

No tax would be imposed which required payment in pennies, and the penny itself, now a nuisance coin, would be abolished.

Every business office would have enough couches for any employe to take an hour's nap after lunch if he chose to.

No more articles made of plastic would be allowed to come on the market except after a full government hearing.

All heavyweight boxing festivals would be billed as shows or exhibitions rather than as countsts, bouts or fights.

Anyone who wanted to enlist in any of the armed services would have the right to, no matter what his physical or mental condition.

Any American who wished to emigrate to another country would have his fare paid there by a grateful U.S. government.

Muggers caught out on the streets after dark would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

These suggestions, if adopted, might not turn the world into a garden of delight, but they would remove some blemishes and curb a few unneccesary annoyances.

Quake Takes 63 Lives

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A severe earthquake rolled across central Chile during the night and the government announced today the toll stood at 63 dead and 317 injured.

Chile's main port of Valparaiso on the Pacific coast appeared to be among the cities hardest hit. Rescue officials there reported 25 dead and about 300 injured.

Information on damage and the number of victims still was sketchy, with many communities isolated by landslides.

The Thursday night quake also was felt through much of Argentina across the Andres, but no casualties or major damage were reported there.

Communications were still shaky or disrupted with the areas north of Santiago that were hit hardest, and there was no word of property damage. It was feared that the casualty toll would rise as more reports came in.

Seismographs in Santiago and abroad measured the quake at a force of around 7 on the Richter scale, but government officials said it registered 10 in the areas hardest hit. This is an unusually high reading–the Alaska quake of 1964 registered 8.25–and there was speculation that the report might be an exaggeration.

Chile's four central provinces, where four million people live, were declared an emergency zone, and police and armed forces moved in to provide food and medical relief.

President Salvador Allende went on the air and pleaded for calm. He planned a helicopter tour of the disaster area today.

Seismographs abroad located the tremor's epicenter near Valparaiso, Chile's second largest city, on the coast 60 miles northwest of the capital. But the interior minister said the quake was strongest in the towns of Illapel, Barbala and Salamanca, 125 miles north of Santiago.

The earthquake struck at 11:03 p.m. as most of Santiago's 3 million people were eating their usual late-night dinners. Frightened crowds poured into the streets, and the power company cut off the electricity to prevent fires. The lights were out for nearly an hour, and telephone service and international communications were cut for an hour and a half.

Walls cracked and windows broke downtown buildings. Several water mains broke, sending water spurting into the cold air of the winter night. Cornices crashed down from buildings. Panicky motorists injured several persons in the dark.

President Allende went on the air immediately to reassure the public; the populace listened on transister radios. "Stay in your homes," the president said. "Take care of your families." But crowds huddled in the streets.

There was a panicky rush for exists in a movie theater. One man died of a heart attack, and about 30 other persons were injured. Walls of a police station fell in, injuring two officials.

Allende sent Minister of State Jaime Suarez to Valparaiso to investigate the situation. The long mountain tunnel of the Santigao-Valparaiso highway was reported blocked.

South of Santiago the force of the quake was much less. In Concepcion, the country's third largest city, 350 miles south of the capital, damage was light.

Chile lies along the perimeter of the so-called "ring of fire" along the Andes and is hit periodically by earthquakes. Minor tremors are fairly common.

Chile's last major quake occurred in 1965 when the shocks broke a dam north of the capital. Four hundred persons were buried under mud and water that roared down on a mining town.

One of South America's worst earthquakes also occurred in Chile in 1960. The shocks in the southern part of the country continued for 10 days, an estimated 5,700 persons were killed and thousands of square miles were devastated.

Surprise Peace Shift Pondered by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. officials say the Nixon administration is pondering the significance of a surprise new shift in the latest peace offensive launched by Vietnamese Communist leaders.

The shift is in the form of a demand for the ouster of only President Nguyen Van Thieu from any future South Vietnamese goverment ready to negotiate an end of war.

Previously North Vietnamese and Viet Cong leaders had insisted that not only Thieu, but Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky and Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem, as well, could be unacceptable in a post-war government.

"For years Communist delegates at the Paris peace talks have been calling for removal of the 'Thieu-Ky-Khiem clique,'" one diplomatic informant said. "They practically pronounced 'Thieu-Ky-Kiem' as one word. Now they've begun speaking only of Thieu."

The shift in the Communist position emerged after Madame Nguyen Thi Binh presented the Viet Cong's latest peace package at the Paris conference July 1. The proposal was for release of all prisoners held by the Communists in the North and South by the year's end, concurrent with withdrawal of all U.S. troops. Her precise words:

"The U.S. government must really respect the South Vietnam people's rights to self-determination, put an end to its interference in the internal affairs of South Vietnam, cease backing the bellicose group headed by Nguyen Van Thieu at present in office in Saigon, and stop all maneuvers, including tricks on elections, aimed at maintaining the puppet Nguyen Van Thieu."

Five days later Le Duc Tho, senior North Vietnamese representative in Paris, endorsed Madame Binh's proposal and in an interview with the New York Times hammered away at Thieu – and Thieu only. He said in part:

"Although it is not admitted...the whole world knows that Thieu has been put in power by the U.S. administration. And the United States will have the decisive voice in the forthcoming elections.

"Therefore if Mr. Nixon is really disposed to settle the whole problem of the war...the question of change of the ruling group now in office in Saigon–headed by Thieu–is in the power of the United States---The forthcoming election in South Vietnam is an opportunity for Mr. Nixon to change Thieu."

Authorities in the State Department have no doubt this subtle Communist move has significance. But just how much significance will be known only when some frank face-to-face talking begins between negotiators for the two sides.

But meantime, several interpretations have been offered by administration experts as to motives of the Vietnamese Communists in changing their position:

— An effort to isolate the inflexible Thieu who, in the 1967 election, won 35 per cent of the votes.

— A bid to deepen the already considerable split between Thieu and Vice-President Ky who, in the past, has boasted of his Northern origins.

— An attempt to advance the prospects of neutralist Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh who led the 1963 coup that ousted President Ngo Dinh Diem. Ky and Minh are opposing Thieu in the October elections.

— A signal to President Nixon that if only he would arrange for Thieu's electoral defeat, there would be a basis for an acceptable negotiated settlement. In this context Le Duc Tho was explicit in asserting his belief Nixon could, if he chooses, do just that.

Another Rock Music Star Dies

PARIS (AP) — Jim Morrison, lead singer of The Doors and a star of the acid rock scene, died in Paris last Saturday and was buried Wednesday in Pere Lachaise cemetery.

The death of the 27-year-old entertainer was announced early today in Los Angeles by his manager William Siddons, and confirmed by U.S. officials in the French capital.

The cause of death was not given on the official listing, but Siddons said he "died peacefully of natural causes."

Siddons attended the funeral and took Morrison's wife, Pamela, back to Los Angeles. The Morrisons had no children.

Max Fink, the singer's personal lawyer, said he had been told that Morrison suffered either a heart attack or died from pneumonia.

Morrison's parents, Rear Adm. and Mrs. George Stephen Morrison of Arlington, Va., said they had talked Thursday with relatives on the West Coast who had heard nothing unusual about their son.

In a statement to newsmen on his arrival in Los Angeles, Siddons said he had "Just returned from France where I attended the funeral of James Morrison. Jim was buried in a simple ceremony with only a few friends present."

Siddons said Morrison's death "was kept quiet because those of us who knew him .... wanted to avoid all the notoriety and circus-like atmosphere that surrounded the deaths of Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix."

Siddons said Morrison had seen a doctor in Paris last Saturday about a respiratory problem and "complained of this problem on the day of his death."

The singer had been in France with his wife since March writing a movie screenplay following a tour of Europe and North Africa, Siddons said.

Born in Melbourne, Fla., and a graduate of UCLA, Morrison and The Doors, based in Hollywood, rose to rock fame in 1967 with the release of an eventual million copy seller, "Light My Fire."

As a singer, Morrison was described by one rock critic as "cold, insolent, evil, slightly mad and seemed to be in some sort of hypnotic trance."

In Miami, Fla., in March, 1969, Morrison was accused of lewd and lascivious conduct for allegedly exposing himself before a huge crowd during a performance by The Doors. He was found innocent of the charge. A court, however, found him guilty of using obscene language during the show.

The incident led to a later "Rally for Decency" in Florida which features other singers and television performers.

N.Y. Workers Admit Regular on Job Drug Usage

NEW YORK (AP)--About 101,000 employed persons who live in New York State admit using marijuana, LSD, methedrine or heroin on a regular basis during work hours, the state Narcotic Addiction Control Commission says.

The report, released Tuesday, said at least 362,000 working people in the state used illegal drugs regularly--at least six times a month--on or off the job.

Redistricting Faces New Wrinkle

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (AP) — A new wrinkle faced the 20-member commission as the battle to revamp Missouri's 163 House of Representative districts resumed today.

If the 10 proposals from Missouri's 10 congressional districts were accepted, there would be 164 districts instead of the required 163.

The extra district seems to be in the controversial 7th Congressional District which includes Greene County and the city of Springfield. Trouble erupted Thursday in that area as the two commissioners—one Democrat and one Republican—locked horns.

"I cannot understand it," said Ted Scott, R-Buffalo.

He said he thought a mistake had been made in drawing up the proposed 7th District which according to his figures should have 17 House seats.

Scott accused the commissioners of "being lazy" and of "fussing when they should have been drawing maps."

Scott said he had been told that a statewide map had been agreed to all except the 7th District. He said other commissioners had threatened to go home if he does not yield a district.

The commission set noon today as the deadline to agree on a tentative map to be filed with the secretary of state or give up on the job and turn it over to the six Missouri Supreme Court commissioners.

Richard Howe, R-Canton, chairman, said late Thursday he was still hopeful an agreement of some kind could be reached, but was discouraged at attempts to keep the 20 members in executive session on a continuous basis.

"I cannot see how any of those commissioners," he said, "would want to turn the task over to the Supreme Court commissioners."

He said a computerized redistricting map would alter existing districks drastically, perhaps cutting through wards and neighborhoods without regard to voter interests.

Legislators worred about the ultimate makeup of their own districts badgered the redistricting commission all day Thursday.

Cotton Planting Biggest Since '65

WASHINGTON (AP(— The Agriculture Deprtment announced Thursday that farmers planted 12,398,600 acres to cotton this year, 4 per cent more than in 1970 and the most since 1965.

There was no estimate of 1971 cotton production. That will be made by the department on Aug. 9.

The acreage estimate compares with 12.1 million acres indicated last March in a projection based on what farmers said they intended to plant for 1971 production.

The Crop Reporting Board said growers in the Southeast planted 1,525,000 acres, up 2 per cent from last year. Plantings were up in each of the Southeastern states except Alabama where the acreage is the same as in 1970.

Cotton planting in the Mississippi Delta state is up 9 per cent from last year, the report said. Increases range from 5 to 15 per cent above last season, including gains in Louisiana of 15 per cent; Mississippi 11 per cent; Missouri 8 per cent; and Tennessee and Arkansas each up 5 per cent.

The Texas crop acreage is 2 per cent more than last year but plantings in Oklahoma are down 11 per cent because of drought in the western part of the state.

The planted acreage is 7 per cent larger from last year in California and 2 per cent more in Arizona. Plantings in New Mexico are down 2 per cent.

Nixon administration farm officials and cotton industry leaders are seeking larger output of the crop this year to help rebuild diminishing reserve supplies.

Production last year was about 10.2 million bales.

Highway Department Pay Hike Approved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The State Highway Commission unanimously approved a salary increase today for most employes of the department. The increase will be included in July pay checks.

The boost will be on a "graduated scale," the commission said, with low pay employes getting the biggest per cent of the increases. The percentages will range from about 15 per cent to 5 per cent.

Commission Chairman Jack Stapleton Sr. of Stanberry said the pay increases were granted to offset effects of increased cost of living on employes' take-home pay.

The department has about 6,800 full time employes.

Earlier this year, the commission met with the House Appropriations Committee to settle some differences about departmental salaries. The committee was irate that previously recommended pay hikes had been ignored and legislators said that was a violation of legislative intent.

A more amiable understanding reportedly was reached as a result of the meeting. The appropriations committee had refused to hear testimony on the department's budget until the meeting.

Three Shot In $142,000 Brink's Haul

NEW YORK (AP)—Two Brink's guards and an elevator starter were shot and wounded today by bandits who made off with $142,000 in a payday robber today at the city's Municipal Building, police said.

The fleeing holdup men raced to a getaway car and escaped across the Brooklyn Bridge.

The Brink's men were delivering money to the Municipal Credit Union office on the third floor of the building.

The two guards stepped into an automatic elevator on the first floor and were joined by the elevator starter, while others were asked to step out, usual procedure in delivering money, police said.

At the second floor, the elevator stopped, opened and two waiting gunmen opened fire, wounding the three occupants, police said.

The gunmen grabbed the cash bundle, police said and ran down a marble stairway and into the streets of the city government complex in lower Manhattan.

The wounded men were reported in satisfactory condition at a hospital.

Save Money on Your Wardrobe

NEW YORK — (NEA) — If you've got the fashion blues you can revitalize your wardrobe without spending a small fortune. The secret is to screen the clothes you have and shop carefully for those you need. Today women are less inclined to submissively follow the latest fashion decree. They wear what they like and what looks right on them.

This is the opinion of Ethel Mooring, fashion executive of Peck & Peck, the nationwide specialty shops. She has designed a money-saving plan that helps to organize what you have and to figure out what you really need. Here's how it works:

Set aside some free time to go through your wardrobe.

Start by listing recent activities you've engaged in during the last month. Include occasional social events such as dinners, cocktail parties, PTA meetings, etc. Jot down the type of clothes worn and those you need for these occasions.

Try on everything in your closet and determine if your things are in good condition, fit, and most of all, whether or not you're tired of them.

Read labels for special cleaning and laundering instructions. Ask sales personnel to help if you have questions.

Women's Retirement Age Ruled On

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman cannot be forced to retire at an earlier age than a man, the 7th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled.

The unanimous decision Wednesday by a three-judge panel held that a company plan based on sex violates the 1964 Civil Rights Act and is "tantamount to discharge."

The court ruled in the case of Ann Bartmess who sued a South Bend, Ind., brewery, Drewrys Limited U.S.A., and Local 275, International Union of United Brewery and Distillery Workers of American [illegible] a contract that held the retirement age for women at 62 and that for men at 65.

Ann Landers

Other Woman Tells Her Side of the Story

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest the letter about "The Other Woman." It's time you printed the other side of the story, Ann. There IS one, you know. Perhaps it doesn't coincide with your concept of morality, but it DOES exist and I wish you'd be fair and print it.

Only the Other Woman knows what it's like to be in love with a married man who can't (or won't) get a divorce. I am not only the Other Woman, I am also a divorcee with three children. In this town I am labeled Brand X. Being the Other Woman puts me on the outside of everything, but I have an added stigma which is even worse. Last year I gave birth to his out-of-wedlock child.

I've known for six rocky years how wrong and futile this affair is but I loved him deeply and I let my heart rule my head. Now I am hoplessly trapped. I can't lead a normal life. People whisper behind my back. No decent man would consider asking me out. Very few women will associate with me. I am hungry for adult company. If it weren't for my kids, I'd lose my mind. So you see, Ann, we are not all tramps and she-devils. We are real people who took a wrong turn in the road and ended up on a — Dead End Street

Dear D.E.S.: Thank you for writing. It's too late to offer advice, dear, so I offer you my condolences.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to complain about your frivolus reply to the short-haired waitress who complained because she has to wear a hairnet while a long-haired fellow who works with her does not. Your answer was funny but not helpful. It also displayed a wealth of ignorance about the health codes and consumer protection laws across the United States. ALL food handlers are required by law to control their hair in a way that will assure the consumer that hair will be kept out of the food and off the contact surfaces.

Since the advent of long hair styles on males it has become increasingly difficult for operators of food service establishments to convince ALL personnel that they must protect the consumers against hair in the food, using whatever means necessary to do so. Your answer didn't help. — C.B.S., Dept. of Health, Minnesota

Dear C.B.S.: Thanks for the come-uppance. I deserved it. If the law says hairnets for everybody, regardless of sex, that settles it. Come to think of it, I'd rather see a fella in a snood than a hair in my soup.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband had a brief and unhappy marriage when he was much younger. They had one child 11 months after the wedding, so you see it was not a shotgun affair.

The problem is that my mother-in-law has an enormous picture of my husband's son in her living room. It is prominently displayed and impossible to miss. Since it is her only grandchild I can see why she would be proud of him. Soon I will be bringing my family to his mother's place, and they do not know about this child. I never felt it was anyone's business to mention his former marriage.

I realize the picture must stay. I have no right to ask my mother-in-law to remove it. My husband has told me I can say whatever I wish. Can you help me find the words? — New Orleans Dilemma

Dear New: A girl who marries a divorced man should tell her family that he had a previous marriage — and they certainly should be informed of any children that resulted from the marriage. I urge you to tell them BEFORE they see the picture and ask, "Who is that?" — or you might be reviving some fainted relatives in your mother-in-law's house.

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage — What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

GOD'S SALVATION POWER

Romans 1:16 is a great verse for removing our shame from and establishing our faith in the miracle -working power of Christ's gospel. It is no less than Paul's own testimony to the good news. It can shape your convictions.

The sun is God's provision for light, heat, and energy. The rain is God's provision for water, refreshing, and vegetation. The earth is God's provision for man's habitation. Healing is God's provision for man's health. Language is God's provision for man's communication. This is only a start, but in every case what God provides is completely adequate.

Paul says the gospel is God's provision for salvation. He even says it is God's powerful provision to this end. Being a "power" for salvation, it can overcome ignorance, unbelief, sinfulness, worldliness, indifference, anxiety, pride, and every other obstacle in the sinner's way. If all of God's provisions are adequate, how much more shall God's "power" produce the desired result?

Further, we are not ashamed to confess that the sun gives light, heat, and energy because the truth is established among us. We believe it and that settles it. So Paul believed the gospel is God's salvation power because he used it. He saw that it produced what God promised, and the fear of failure and embarrassment were gone. He proclaimed. God produced. He believed. He was not ashamed. It can happen to you!

'Gang Preacher' to Speak at Cape Arena

CAPE GIRARDEAU – Dave Wilkerson, the famed author of the cross and the switchblade, and known around the world as the "Gang Preacher," will be speaking at Arena Park at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

The public is invited.

Wilkerson is widely known for his successful work among drug addicts and gang members in New York ghettos. His book, The Cross And The Switchblade, written about his work, has sold over six million copies.

In 1958 Wilkerson became famous in the New York area for interrupting the Michael Farmer murder trial. Seven young gang members were on trial for the brutal murder of polio victim, Michael Farmer. In an attempt to help the young gang members, Wilkerson interrupted the court session and was promptly dragged from the courtroom. The ensuing publicity made the young minister from Pennsylvania a hero among New York's 350 teenage gangs. The gangs were soon allowing him to visit and speak in their hideouts, from which came the nickname, "The Gang Preacher."

Dave Wilkerson is the founder of New York Teen Challenge, one of America's most successful drug addiction programs. Teen Challenge claims an amazing 74 per cent cure rate among heroin users who have completed its program.

Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center, Inc. owns 262 acres of land 3 miles north of Cape Girardeau, Missouri. This was given by an interested

Rose, who scored the winning run in the 12th inning of last year's All-Star Game, was named to the National League squad for the sixth time. Santo has been selected seven times.

Anderson also announced that managers Walter Alston of Los Angeles, Danny Murtaugh of Pittsburgh and Preston Gomez of San Diego will serve as AllStar coaches. The team trainers will be Leo Hughes of the San Francisco Giants.

Sr. Babe Ruth

When you are number one its great, but when you are number two, you try harder. Such was the case last night in Junior Babe Ruth baseball play. Second Place Harts Standard slipped past previously unbeaten Elks in a nine inning contest. Harts' Bill Wake scored in the ninth to give his team a 3-2 victory.

In the nightcap Lindsey M & H defeated Leible Implement 9-2. Ed McDowell fanned 13 Leible batters and collected the victory.

Last night's first game went nine innings before three straight singles by Harts sent Wake in to score the winning run. Wake's single was followed by a hit from Pickett and the game winning hit by Dan Lefler.

Harts blasted Elks pitcher Blankenship for 12 hits and scored first with a run in the opening inning. Lefler, Vaught, Collier, and Wake all connected for two hits in the Harts battery.

Gary Vaught handled the pitching chores for the winners. In the Elks lineup, six batsmen connected for the six Elks' tallies. Randy Reynolds added the team's extra base hit, a double in the second inning.

Lindsey scored five runs in the opening frame and added three more runs in the second to jump into an early 8-0 advantage over Leible. Leibles' one run in the sixth and one run in the seventh haulted the M & H bid for shut out.

McDowell held Leible to only two hits in the game, a double from Julian Moore and a single from George Hensley.

Lindsey connected for four hits off of Lieble hurlers, Colwick and Hei. M & H batsmen Walker, McDowell, LaPlant, and Melton belted Lindsey's hits.

American League

Caproco pitcher Sam McCord fired a four inning, no hitter to boost his team through a 22-0 triumph over Ryan Construction. McCord faced 19 batters in the opening American League game, struck out nine batters and walked five.

In the second game Fabick picked up its second victory as Ziegenhorn Insurance failed to show nine players at game time. Fabick's forfeit victory leaves it on top of the east division standings with a 10-0 mark.

Caproco supplied Pitcher McCord with 10 hits and 22 runs. First baseman Gardner belted a double and home run to pace Caproco's hitting. Teammates Hurley and Marcum added two hits each.

Gardner opened on the mound and was relieved by Couch. Gardner took the defeat.

Three runs in the first inning gave Caproco all the margin needed, but six runs in the second inning and 12 tallies in the third lifted the winner into a 21-0 lead.

Devine Balks At Pro 'De-Humanizing' Tag

EDITORS NOTE: Tommy Prothro has his Los Angeles Rams in training camp today and next week it's Dan Devine's turn with his Green Bay Packers as both rookie coaches begin preparations for their first season in the National Football League. Prothro and Devine sat down with Associated Press sports Writers Mike Rathet and Will Grimsley for a roundtable discussion of the challenge inherent in their first crack at the pros.

By MIKE RATHET
and WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Is football de-humanizing as its critics claim?

Not to rookie pro coaches Tommy Prothro of the Los Angeles Rams and Dan Devine of the Green Bay Packers, each of whom asks a pertinent question in answering the critics.

''Is discipline de-humanizing?'' Prothro asks.

"Where else in the United States is there a more humanizing thing?" asks Devine.

But those are only part of their emotion-filled answers in this final part of a three-part series in which Prothro and Devine reveal the challenges of their new jobs.

The questions and answers:

Grimsley: You've both heard or read about the word "dehumanizing" as applied to football by Dave Meggyesy and other players. Do you think football has gotten to a point where it's de-humanizing?

Prothro: To start with—these people that are attacking athletics or many other things whip you with nomenclature before you start. Now I know you're for athletics, but yet they've sold you on a word already—'de-humanizing.' What have we done that's de-humanizing? Is discipline de-humanizing? If that's true, then we've de-humanized them.

But it used to be that you said football had discipline. Now you say football is dehumanizing. There's a lot of difference. We've added a word to discipline too in Meggyesy's and George Sauer's write-ups—it's 'child-like discipline.' This is ridiculous. I have never known a child that had any discipline at all. It takes a pretty mature human being to become disciplined. When we add childlike to the word we've whipped ourselves before we started or they did or whoever brought up this thing.

There's all this talk now about people quitting football. I don't think anybody in football thinks that football is a game for everybody. Ever since there's been football people have been quitting.

The difference is now they've written a magazine article about it or gone on TV. They used to come home and explain that the coach didn't like them or something like that was the reason they failed in the sport. Now it's civil rights or psychology or sociology or something that caused them to fail in the sport. And Sauer ... this isn't anything new for Sauer. Sauer quit at Texas.

And there'll always be a lot of people quit football. But to me one of the greatest things about football is its discipline.

I don't believe that everything ought to be discipline. But I think that whenever a group of people is striving to reach a goal they have to have discipline. There isn't any way that a squad of 40 people can all think exactly alike. So they've got to have a constituted authority and they've got to go in the direction of that constituted authority. Now that doesn't mean they can't change that constituted authority, but there has to be a constituted authority. And I think, really in American life today, we don't have an over-abundance of discipline, we have an under-abundance of it. We need more of it.

Devine: My experiences in football have been extremely humanizing. It's difficult for me to picture what these people are talking about because there are thousands and thousands of kids in Missouri who would literally give their right arm to play for the University of Missouri. And I can't tell you the number of free agents and former players who have written me just for a tryout with Green Bay. I'm not going to mention any names, but they're big names.

A heck of a lot of kids want to make that high school team and that professional team. Gosh, to me—my experiences so far have been connected with extremely religious boys. There's men on the Green Bay team, Carroll Dale and Bart Starr, just to name a couple, who are probably some of the greatest Christians alive. Here's a group of guys completed devoted to a cause with virtually no regard for race, color, creed, economic stature. Where else in the United States is there a more humanizing thing? Certainly New York City with its slums couldn't be set up as such a humanizing thing.

Rathet: Do you treat things differently now than in the past because of the knowledge that the word 'de-humanizing' is being bandied about?

Devine: I'm a little more aware of the change in people—a little bit of change in society. I'm more careful with the words that I'm using, but only because I never really used any of them in any derogatory sense but have found some taken that way.

I grew up in a little town where there was a heck of a lot of prejudice. It was only a little town of about 2,000 people and it was the popular thing—we didn't have any black people—to be prejudiced against somebody other than your own religion.

Doomed Queen of the Adriatic

One of the glories of Western civilization, the slowly sinking island city of Venice faces a fate possibly even worse than the watery death predicted within a century. Even earlier its splendors may succumb to pollution, natural and manmade. The pigeons which turn the Piazza of St. Mark into a sea of movement, right, to the enchantment of tourists are also a hazard. Their droppings are a major factor in stone deterioration, as is smoke from the industrial mainland. Noble palaces on close examination often show cracked, peeling facades, below. Decay is further hastened by constant lapping of canal waters churned by proliferating motorboats, bottom left. Corroded statue, bottom right, symbolizes crumbling Venice's plight.

Looking Back

McKnight-Keaton Expands Space

50 years ago
July 9, 1921

The many friends of Miss Mary Wilson and James Johnson were surprised to learn of their marriage last Sunday morning, which occurred at the home of Mrs. Sam Tenkhoff in Oran. The Rev. F. M. Love, pastor of the Methodist Church at that place, performed the ceremony. Attendants were the bride's sister, Miss Hazel Wilson, and Tom Baty. They are making their home with the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs.C. B. Johnson of South Ranney avenue.

Last Saturday night announcement was made of the marriage of Miss Florence Shuffit to Boyd Scillian on Saturday night, May 14. The couple had kept their marriage a secret until last Saturday. They were married by the Rev. A. H. Barnes at his home. After this week Mr. and Mrs. Scillian will reside at the home of the latter's mother until a home is secured.

The official board of the Sikeston Methodist Church, Tuesday evening, asked that the Rev. T. B. Mather be appointed to fill out the unexpired pastorate of the late Dr. A. H. Four Area Students Briefed on Careers

ROLLA--They are learning how it would be to be an engineer or a scientist, or what a career in the liberal arts would offer. And through it all, they are learning what they can do with their chosen profession to help mankind.

About 65 high school students at a time are taking part in each of three one-week sessions on careers at the University of Missouri. Four area youths, Joseph Dodd, Caruthersivlle, Paula Medler and Laura Webb, Dexter, and Mary Beth Todt, Sikeston, completed such a session.

While on campus, the students live in university dormitories and attend sessions in engineering, science and liberal arts.

They talk with UMR faculty and students and tour the campus facilities. The emphasis is on their choice of a college study program and the career that follows it. The emphasis is also on how they, through their careers, can help mankind.

Each week, one full day and parts of others are devoted to the environmental challenge. On Mondays, students hear lectures by UMR professors on such environmenttal issues as these--what about pollution from internal combustion engines and power plants, how clean is nuclear energy, does nature pollute itself and what possibilities there are for recycling solid wastes. And, students are challenged by the faculty to solve pollution problems in the future.

To dramatize the pollution issue and ways to solve it, students are taken on tours of the UMR Nuclear Reactor, the mechanical engineering energy conversion laboratories, the Rolla waste treatment plant, and the sanitary landfill. At the treatment plant, they see how sewage is treated in various stages. They collect samples of water and soil for later analysis in the laboratory. And, at the sanitary landfill, they see how garbage and trash are buried in the earth, forming the site of a futre recreational area.

Students on that day, see a demonstration how to make waste products useful. They hear about metal recycling and about waste glass that is formed into building blocks and that is mixed with asphalt for paving--both research projects going on at UMR.

"It's a broad look at the environmental challenge which we get in a day," one student said. "But a look at that sanitary landfill makes me feel differently toward garbage."

Environmental challenges are worked in during the rest of the week, when students take part in such activities as a tour of the Rolla Regional Diagnostic Center, the Missouri Geological Survey and Water Resources and the UMR experimental mine.

According to Dr. Jack H. Emanuel, associate professor of civil engineering and director of the program, the careers institute is held each summer at UMR to help high school students decide on their future. Nearly all of UMR's summer faculty is involved in the careers institute. Especially active in the environmental aspect this time were Professor Robert Wolf, chairman of the department of metallurgical and nuclear engineering; Dr. Nord Gale, assistant professor of life sciences; Dr. D. Ray Edwards, director of the Nuclear Reactor; and Professor Chuck Remington of the mechanical and aerospace engineering department.

Hollywood Big Wheels Blow Gaskets

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Status symbols come and go, but in Hollywood the car is still the measure of who you are. But today it isn't the big, flashy, block-long limousine that spells "importance," it's the souped-up sports car.

"The Cadillac and the Lincoln and the Chrysler Imperial," says Vilem Haan, "are the transportation cars today. The stars use them just to get around. When they want to have fun or impress somebody, they use their sports cars."

Haan heads a company which has made a big thing out of sports car accessories. They sell by mail and through distributors all over the country, but here in Hollywood Haan has a retail store. It's a better place to see celebrities than the Brown Derby.

Nick Ashford and Valerie Simpson

You'll see Ferrari owners, such as Jim Garner, James Coburn, Steve McQueen; Jaguar drivers Lloyd Nolan and Mel Torme; Porsche people Dick Crenna, Stu Gilliam, Bob Mitchum, Roy Thinnes and Michael Dunn—and too many Mercedes-Benz folks to mention.

And there are some, like Dick Smothers, who don't know when to stop—Dickie drives a Mercedes, a Porsche and a Jaguar, presumably one at a time.

They all come in to buy new gadgets. Haan calls his place "a grownup's candy shop," and that sums it up neatly. Like Stu Gilliam, who bought five sets of musical Maserati air horns — they play "Colonel Bogey," "Never On Sunday," "La Cucaracha," "Lili Marlene" and "O Sole Mio." Everybody needs them.

Arte Johnson got a new car and his first step was Haan's, so he could get a leather wheel cover. Garner dropped by for five pairs of racing goggles. Whenever Japan's Toshire Mifune is in California, he stops in for a few necessities, such as new car badges. Ditto Cantinflas, from Mexico. Alex Dreier treated himself to a push-button lighted compass. Buddy Hackett ordered four racing suits, with matching helmets and gloves. Steve McQueen outfitted himself for his role in "Le Mans" at Haan's.

SCOTCH SPY FAMILY, OR CLANDESTINE

A couple of thoughts about music today, from Valerie Simpson and Nickolas Ashford. They're big with Motown — he writes and she writes. She's also started singing and they've combined on a smash new album, "Exposed."

Valerie started out to be a classical pianist, and she says you'd be surprised how many pop artists today have solid musical backgrounds. But it's all hush-hush, clandestine, she says.

"They won't admit it," she says. "They try to hide the fact that they have musical training. There's more pride, today, in being someone who made it without studying music."

But she is proud of her pianistic history, and you can tell, in her music, that she isn't just noodling around—she knows what she's doing.

Val and Nick share another musical background—gospel. They say it's bigger than ever.

"Lots of pop hits today," Nick says, "are real gospel—the Jesus influence."

The two met in a New York church and have been making beautiful music together since. "Exposed" is her first album as a performer, but it won't be her last. Nick will probably join her on another one, and maybe do one of his own, too.

Nick and Val are the team who wrote "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" for Diana Ross and they've also written for Ray Charles, Aretha Franklin, the Fifth Dimension and Marvin Gaye.

Pitfalls in Buying Rented Second Home

ST. LOUIS -- A vacation home that is rented out when not being used by its owners can offer a have-your-cake-and-eat-it-too investment opportunity, but it can also be a pitfall for the unwary, according to James B. Porter, president of the Missouri Society of Certified Public Accountants.

More than 1½ million families have second homes, many of which were paid for by rental income, Porter says, and according to the Commerce Department the median value of these homes away from home is $7,800.

Porter warns that such investments can decline in value because of poor construction, overdevelopment of the neighborhood or the high cost of insurance against fire, flood, vandalism and other hazards to which remote houses are subject.

Another danger is that the area may become so built up that wells and septic tanks no longer will do and expensive municipal water and sewer systems have to be installed, with no commensurate increase in the value of the house.

Porter advises would-be investors in second homes to investigate carefully the zoning and building codes, if any, before buying, especially in sparsely settled areas where the character of the neighborhood has not yet been established.

But when the dangers he cites are skirted, Porter said he believes the vacation home that helps defray its own costs can be a good investment.

"In addition to letting renters pay off the mortgage," he says, "repairs, maintenance and services can be taken as income tax deductions to the extent that the place is rented; the family can enjoy low - cost vacations; and real-estate ownership can be a hedge against inflation."

Car Manufacturer Not Liable

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

The only two things that Alvin kept spick -and -span were his bowling ball and his four - year -old car. Throwing the former into the latter, one evening, he went out for some recreation and ended up with a wreck -reation.

His brakes failed to hold and he crashed into a preceeding automobile. Pulling himself out of the pretzel -bent vehicle, Alvin discovered that the reason his brakes had copped out was because the brake fluid had leaked out.

Taking a dim view of the cause of the accident, Alvin sued the manufacturer of his car for the injuries that both he and his car suffered.

"Faulty brakes," he complained in court, "is as dangerous as a moth-eaten parachute. Not to install a device to forewarn a driver that he's losing brake - fluid is pure negligence on the part of an automobile manufacturer."

"Nonsense!" responded the manufacturer. "You can't make a car that's going to remain perfect indefinitely. While you can innoculate a person against measles, you can't innoculate a car against defects. Sooner or later, something's going to go wrong and that includes losing brake fluid."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the car manufacturer liable for Alvin's accident?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a manufacturer has no duty to furnish a machine that will never wear out or that will never require replacement of worn parts. His duty, noted the judge, is merely to make it free of latent defects and concealed dangers and hazards.

Arson Suspected In Lounge Fire

HAYTI -- Arsonists were successful Wednesday in their second attempt in less than two years to burn the Idle Hour Lounge on the outskirts of Hayti.

The mixed drink establishment has been closed for well over a year, after its license was revoked by the state liquor control department for violations. The building was owned by Kenneth Lawrence.

Hayti Fire Department was called to the scene at 3:59 a.m. after an unidentified person called the Pemiscot County Sheriff's office to report blazes in the building.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said arson was suspected. The building's interior was gutted, a spokesman noted.

Firemen were greeted with an overpowering smell of fuel oil, a spokesman said. Earlier, the building had been the target of an arson attempt however little damage was done at that time. Paint thinner was believed to have been the flamable substance used during the last attempt, a spokesman said.

The lounge is situated on the outskirts of Hayti on Hayti 84 east of the city.

Investigation by the sheriff's department and the Missouri Highway Patrol was underway.

The Prayer
from The Upper Room

PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, we thank You for Your Son Jesus who saved us through the sacrifice of Himself. We pray that we may be one, as You and He are one. In His name. Amen.

Gov. Leonard Hand of Portageville and Owen Taul of Lilbourn.

Hastings is running for Lieutenant Governor of the division 15 of the Missouri-Arkansas district of Kiwanis International.

Lea and George Kirk, secretary, have returned home from the convention of Kiwanis International at San Francisco.

Lea reported on the spiritual needs of Americans and Kiwanians, which consisted of a message by a Lutheran layman entitled "A Season for All Men," given at the convention.

Kirk said he enjoyed the music as much as anything. Many clubs sent chorus', quartets and bands to the convention. The Kiwanis club of Poplar Bluff sent a quartet.

Sod House Fair Attraction

SEDALIA -- One of the oldest, newest attractions at the Missouri State Fair Aug. 21-29 will be a replica of an authentic, pioneer sod house. On the west side of the Sedalia fairgrounds, the house will offer fairgoers a look at the way their Missourian forefathers lived on the windy plains when land was cheap and life was rugged.

The walls of the 30' X 20' X 8' structure are made of "bricks" constructed with one-half acre of sod laid like building brick and filled in with fine clay. Native white and black oak make up the roofing. Though not exactly waterproof, the house provides its own insulation -- warm in the winter and cool in the summer.

The house will be furnished with authentic pioneer - style furnishings including a wood cook stove believed to have been bought in 1880. Also among the furnishings will be a wash stand complete with a wash pan, water bucket and dipper, an iron bedstead, and a baby cradle.

Visitors to this free attraction will have an opportunity to see locally-grown sorghum being made into sorghum molasses on the sod house's front lawn. An oxen team of 3-year-old Holsteins hitched to a covered wagon will graze in the backyard.

Fairgoers can see the sod house and many other sesquicentennial attractions.

New Industry Provides 50 Jobs

CAIRO– A new industry bringing 50 jobs and almost a half a million dollars in capital investment to the two-county area was announced today through the office of Richard B. Ogilvie.

Lending agency for the Cache River Lumber Incorporated will be the Pulaski-Alexander Development Corporation which will purchase the Tamms Industries building and install the equipment to cut hardwood lumber.

PADCO will receive the $268,870 loan recently approved by the Small Business Administration, a $76,820 loan from Security Bank and Trust Company of Cairo and will contribute its own loan of $38,410 obtained through the Illinois Industrial Development Authority for the financing.

The building and the equipment will then be presented to Cache River Lumber and its president Mel Elizer and Treasurer Milton Chaudoin on a lease-purchase agreement which extends over 15 years.

The lumber company is presently located near Vienna which will soon be part of a highway improvement project.

Present employment at the Vienna location is about 20 people with 30 more expected to be hired when the plant assumes full operation in Tamms.

"We will install an entirely new production line with the most modern technical application of equipment lending itself to one of the most efficient hardwood lumber facilities in the Midwest," Elizer said.

"We plan to utilize local resources in lumber in keeping with modern conservation practices, thus adding further to the income of area residents," he added.

The plant will occupy 36,000 square feet of space and 24 acres of ground.

In making the announcement, Gov. Ogilvie stressed the cooperation between federal, state and local agencies which made the move possible.

Primarily involved were the office of U.S. Rep. Ken Gray, who made the initial announcement of the SBA loan, the Illinois Department of Business and Economic Development and the city of Tamms, as well as PADCO.

Nolan Jones, executive director of PADCO, singled out Tamms officials for his praise.

"We could not have completed this project without the wholehearted cooperation we received from Tamms," he said.

"This project is the culmination of months of work by many agencies, including the offices of Sen. Charles Percy and Sen. Adlai Stevenson.

"The effect of $500,000 initial capital investment and the continuing contribution of thriving industry makes will be felt by all residents of the two county area PADCO serves," he said.

Dexter Water Needs Called Urgent

DEXTER – The need for more water, and more water pressure in order to provide adequate fire protection in Dexter is "urgent", First Chief Al Banken told the Dexter Kiwanis Club this week at its weekly luncheon meeting.

Banken, a veteran fireman and the man in charge of fire safety measures for the city, said that there are "many cases" in the city where there is an inadequate supply of water should there be a major fire.

He cited in particular the north side of Dexter, beginning north of the railroad tracks and extending northward. In this area, he said, there is an insufficient flow from the water hydrants, and pressure is very low.

He cited the instance several months ago when water from a fire hydrant was used to wash mud off a street near the new federal housing development. The water pressure suddenly became so low that a nearby plant was "out of water" in "just a few minutes."

"If we had a real house fire in that area, accompanied by a wind we could have a real tragedy and lose several houses," the fire chief declared.

In another part of the city, he said a fireman could "step on a two inch water line and stop the flow of water," so low is the pressure.

Banken, estimated, in reponse to a question that "about 30 per cent of Dexter" does not have adequate fire protection due to an inadequate water supply or low pressure. He cited mainly the north part of Dexter, extending from the northeast to the northwest.

"And every day we see new homes being built and new businesses, all of which means more water, and the need for more fire protection," the chief added.

He said there was numerous hydrants throughout the city, where the fire department can "pump them dry" in a matter of a few minutes. "Or the pressure is so low that it is not providing enough protection in case of fire," he added.

Banken also talked of the needs of the fire department -- but quickly added that "our greatest tool is water, and our greatest need is water."

He said that he and members of the department, working with the Missouri Inspection Bureau, are developing plans for a new fire station in Dexter. It will be located north of the railroad tracks but the exact location has not been determined.

And sometime, in the near future, Dexter must give thought to a new fire truck and some new equipment, the fire chief indicated. He said that such plans are being developed and will be presented to the City Council in the near future.

Banken praised the Dexter volunteer force of 16 firemen, but said the day was approaching when city officials must consider the appointment of one or more fulltime firemen, or drivers. But this, too, will be considered by the City Council at a later date.

Telephone Strike Possible

Mark Rudloff, manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, said today there is a possibility of a telephone strike.

Rudloff explained that the contract of Western Electric Company, who are working in most of the Southwestern Bell buildings, will terminate Wednesday. The contract is with the communication Workers of America, district six.

"If an agreement is not reached by Western Electric on their contract, they could picket those buildings they are working in, which in effect, "would be a strike," Rudloff commented.

He said the contract is open-ended, which means negotiations could continue after Wednesday without a strike.

He said that the contract of Southwestern Bell with the CWA will terminate July 17.

The Western Electric and Southwestern Bell contracts are separate.
